NEW TRIER EAST HIGH SCHOOL
WINNETKA, ILLINOIS

MOVIN' ON

"WHEN MY NUMBER was called, I never knew it; in fact I can't even remember in what year it occurred. The best I can do is say that sometime during my high school career everything fell into place. Every experience that ever happened to me at New Trier played a role in it, no matter how minor: joy, sorrow; popularity, rejection; love, hate; pride, cowardice; and yes, even passing and failing.

"The process was a gradual one that started when I first wandered in off Winnetka Ave. Since then, I've gotten to know myself under a multitude of conditions. I was not always proud of my actions and many I regret. On the other hand, many fantastic things happened which resulted in self confidence, humility, and an appreciation for the first floor locker, among other things. I guess the best way to sum up the overall feeling is to simply say it was a study of opposites. I've had the best times of my life here as well as the worst. I can honestly say, though, that my career at New Trier has been a profitable one because I've learned more about myself than I ever imagined. With the rest of my life ahead of me, I now wonder if my number really was called."

Mrs. Mary Ida McGuire

Mr. Carl W. Clader

Looking back

JUNE 1978 brought with it the retirement of two of New Trier East's most valued and respected faculty members, Mr. Carl W. Clader and Mrs. Mary Ida McGuire. Mr. Clader has been a science teacher at New Trier since 1939 and has served as Head of the science department since 1965. Mrs. McGuire began teaching at New Trier in 1958, became English department chairman in 1965, and has been Director of instructional services since 1970. Their departures marked the end of two long, productive careers in education. In honor of their retirements and in light of their years of experience, ECHOES '78 decided to interview Mr. Clader and Mrs. McGuire about changes they have observed at New Trier during their careers. Our report follows.

THE DEBATE BETWEEN 1956 and 1966 was a period of tremendous change in America's educational system. The United States government took a much greater interest in the quality of education throughout the nation, especially in the fields of math and science. As Mr. Clader noted, this interest was a direct result of the launching by the Soviets of SPUTNIK in 1956: "Fearing a loss of technological superiority, the United States government was embarrassed into an intensive campaign to upgrade the educational system, especially in the applied sciences and mathematics, which experienced a great increase in growth and popularity." At New Trier East the students responded to this program with a hard working, straight forward approach to schoolwork. There was, according to Mrs. McGuire, "an atmosphere of tremendous pressure and competition." Everyone was caught up in the push for academic excellence. Students did not question the policies of the school, or of the establishment for that matter, as they followed social patterns and met what Mrs. McGuire called "societal expectations." The style of dress, which was always neat and proper, though less than individualistic, reflected the spirit of uniformity characteristic of these times.

With the coming of the radical 60's, full of demonstrations and protest, a change gradually came about in the nation's attitudes. "People became skeptical of authority," said Mrs. McGuire, "and there was a national assertion of teacher and student rights." Students began to question the relevance of what they were learning in school. Pressure exerted by the student body forced a change in the faculty and administration's viewpoint. New Trier had to develop a more varied and modern curriculum. The addition of general-interest courses, such as "The Role of Women" and "Human Behavior," exemplified this change in attitude, as did the first EFFE day, which was as much an attempt to add variety as it was to give students "tangible evidence" that the administration was aware and responsive to their demands. Again, students expressed their attitude through their dress. Appearance was not nearly as important as "being." Hair was long and generally unkempt. Clothes grew shabbier and more unusual with each passing day. Girls turned to miniskirts and jeans, while boys popularized beat-up army jackets.

In contrast to the turbulent 60's the students of the 70's seem to have settled down and become more serious about life in general. Mr. Clader commented that "education following a period of emphasis upon excellence and variety, has returned to stressing the fundamentals, except that science and math have now been replaced by the Humanities in popularity and growth in high school." Things have quieted down after the excesses of the previous years-an expected change according to Mrs. McGuire, who observed that "every revolution has a counter-revolution; this is what we are seeing now." Hand in hand with this sentiment, today's dress reflects the conservative nature of our student body. Clothes are no longer outlandish; in fact there seems to be a return to more traditional style, as people become more aware of their appearances.

Still, the students of the late 70's are not completely like their pre-60's counterparts. Mr. Clader feels that the ever-increasing number of working mothers, resulting in empty homes for kids to come home to after school, has contributed to the delinquency and general "goofing-off" of contemporary high schoolers. Mr. Clader further points out that the students are not spending nearly as much time after school at New Trier for either curricular or extra-curricular activities. He recalls a time when his lab would be open until 5 p.m. for students who wanted to work on experiments. As for non-academic after-school activities, Mr. Clader says he has seen a good number of them "go down the tube" in recent years. However, neither Mr. Clader nor Mrs. McGuire feels that today's students are apathetic, as is often charged. Instead they attribute the relative inactivity of the day to the fact that there is a definite lack of explosive issues.

As far as trends on the quality of teaching at New Trier, both felt that the style of teaching hasn't changed that much. The faculty, although younger, is of as high or higher a calibre than at any time in the past and continues the well-known standards of academic excellence which New Trier East has come to represent. When asked, in light of current fiscal conservatism, whether New Trier could maintain its traditionally high standards, both were adamant that it could. Mr. Clader summed up the situation in this fashion: "Schools have always had money problems. Those we have now are nothing compared with the difficulties we encountered during the Depression. Also, the trend in the future seems to be towards lower enrollment. This will allow New Trier to operate at more ideal capacity, making it easier to teach. With fewer students, the funds from the immediate community and state will stretch further."

Mrs. McGuire added that "as long as you have the human resources, then you can transcend the problems. New Trier is what it is because of the quality of the people here. I have no doubt that we will maintain our standards in the future. We will not only endure, we will prevail!"

In conclusion, Mr. Clader and Mrs. McGuire remarked that the student bodies they have seen at NTE, though differing in minor ways, all retain the same basic qualities, of motivation, determination, and appreciation which set them far above the average highschoolers. Mrs. McGuire, expressing what both she and Mr. Clader believe as they look back on their years at New Trier, concluded that "what the students have in common over the years far exceeds their differences."

ALTHOUGH SOME OLD-TIMERS might shake their heads sadly and sigh at the sight of long hair on both sexes, they would be relieved to note that traditions at New Trier have not totally disappeared. True, they might not recognize the Ashtray, co-ed gyms, or girls in jeans. They might find themselves lost in our maze of color-coordinated hallways and disapprove of more open teaching techniques which use incomprehensible text books. But they could find some aspects of the New Trier they knew so well, especially in the excitement of the autumn Saturday football games. In the cheerleaders giving life to the mass of spectators, the band booming our song through the air, and the half-time pom-pon entertaining all, they would see that school spirit was as alive as ever.

Yet times do change, and new possibilities come into view. Now field hockey and other girls' sports are becoming just as popular as more traditional high school games. But even with varied faces and genders, the patterns remain intact: the game is fun, the fans are out to see their team win, and on any given Saturday, if the sun is out and the leaves are changing, the timeless ritual of high school beats on for another generation of fans.

SUPPOSE YOU WANTED to psyche up an entire school for one pressure-packed Saturday football game. How would you go about it?
Would you use: banners
pep rallies
"chew-em up" gum

ice cream socials concerts?

Sure you would, but what would you call it?
Homecoming! what else?

AVOID THE RUSH, BUY NOW AND MAKE YOUR CHRISTMAS A MERRY ONE! A simple red-nosed Santa beams mechanically in burning neon through a storefront window. A string of haphazard lights guides the early shoppers through the maze of stores and alleyways of gifts. Children tug and pull at harried parents' sleeves pointing out toy after toy in a fast game of expectations.

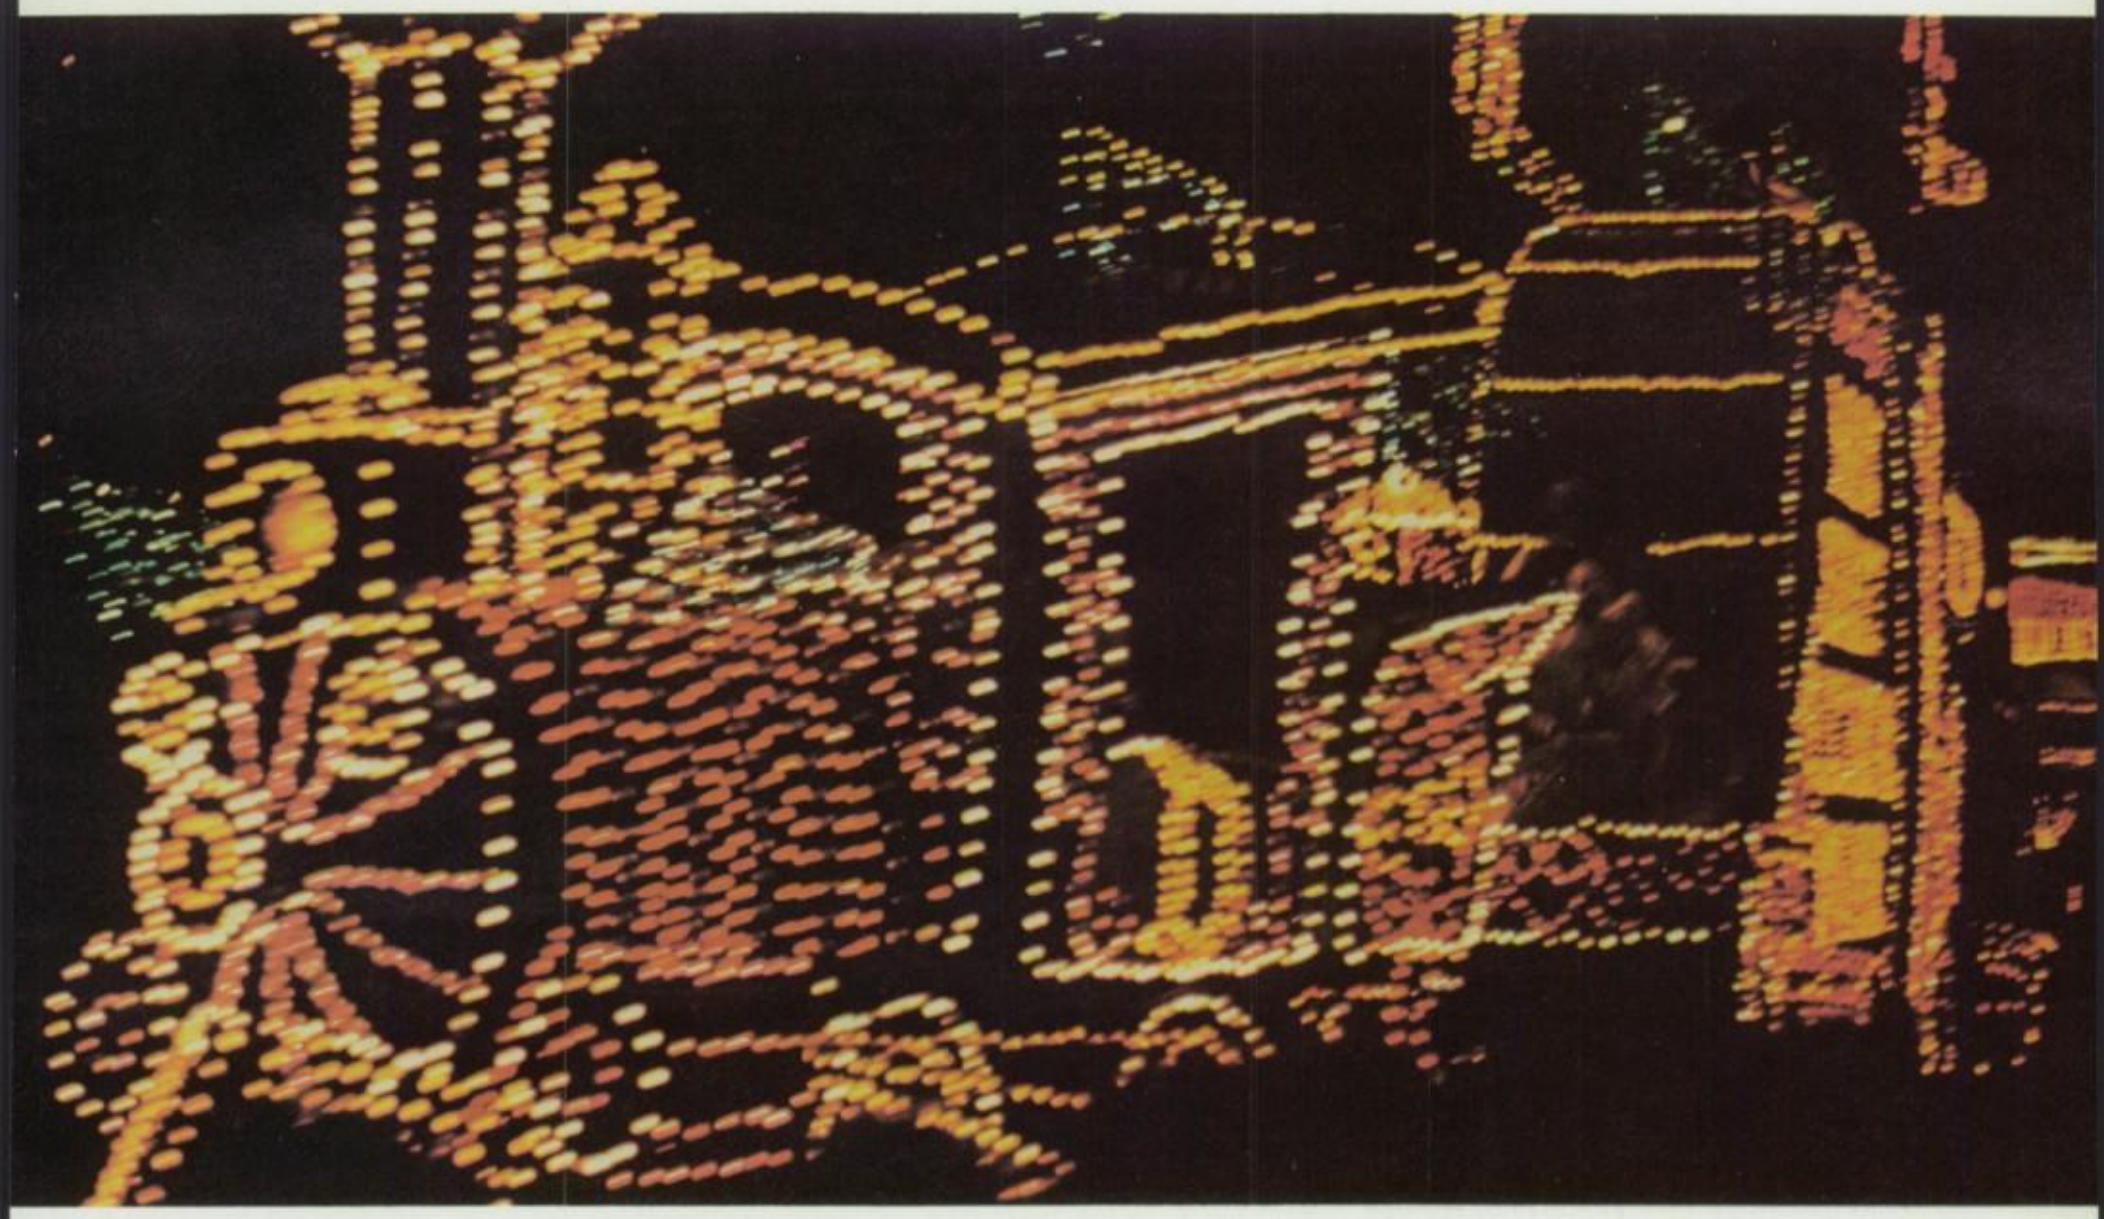
A single snowflake falls.

Comfortable in their warm house, the family prepares to deck the trees with electric stars and smear the windowpanes with aerosol snow. The roof displays a sleigh and eight reindeer placed there by a reluctant father who tottered on the shingles for hours in the cold. The Christmas meal is produced by mother from cardboard cartons off the grocery store shelf.

A blanket of white spreads over the quiet earth.

After months of expectant advertisement, Christmas morning arrives as scheduled. The children rush down the carpeted halls and dive under the evergreen that harbors multicolored boxes with unknown contents. The living room is alive with flurries of wrappings and ribbons. The Christmas tree will eventually sicken in its strange element and be discarded into the cold. Post-Christmas sales soon descend on the busy city: time to stock for the next holiday.

Out in the wilderness the world is a peaceful crystalline white. No red Santa burns here. The drifts pile comfortably in their own ways, shifting with the winds. The trees are decorated simply by the falling snow flakes, and Christmas morning comes solemnly, creeping silently over the land.



DARKNESS. A fumbling noise as someone searches for matches. Suddenly a brilliant flame lights up the night, the rays trailing wisps of smoke in their path. The flame is held to the wick and, its work finished, is extinguished with an unthinking whisk of its master's hand. The candle's slender whiteness becomes the center of attention. All eyes are focused on the flame, the orange and white crown on the tiny blue body. It wavers, then returns to muster energy to ascend yet again. The walls have become alive with dancing shadows. The soft, misty light shines on calmly, echoing the kindred holiday spirit.

Working

I'VE BEEN WORKING IN THE DRUGSTORE
To be sung to the tune of "I've been working on the railroad."

I've been working in the drugstore, after-school each day.
I've been working in the drugstore just so money comes my way.
Will it last me through this week-end, movies and all the rest?
I'm sure the currency is worth it, employment is the best!

"Sonny won't you fetch, Sonny won't you fetch, Sonny won't you fetch a bar of soap!
Inventory check, Inventory check, Listerine, Dial, and Scope!"

"Someone's at the counter, stock-boy.
Someone's at the register.
Shut-up kid and move your back-side, we mustn't lose a customer!"

Fee, fi, teen years are a crime.
Jobs and high school leave no free time.
It seems homework does not pay;
I think I'll do the job and stay!

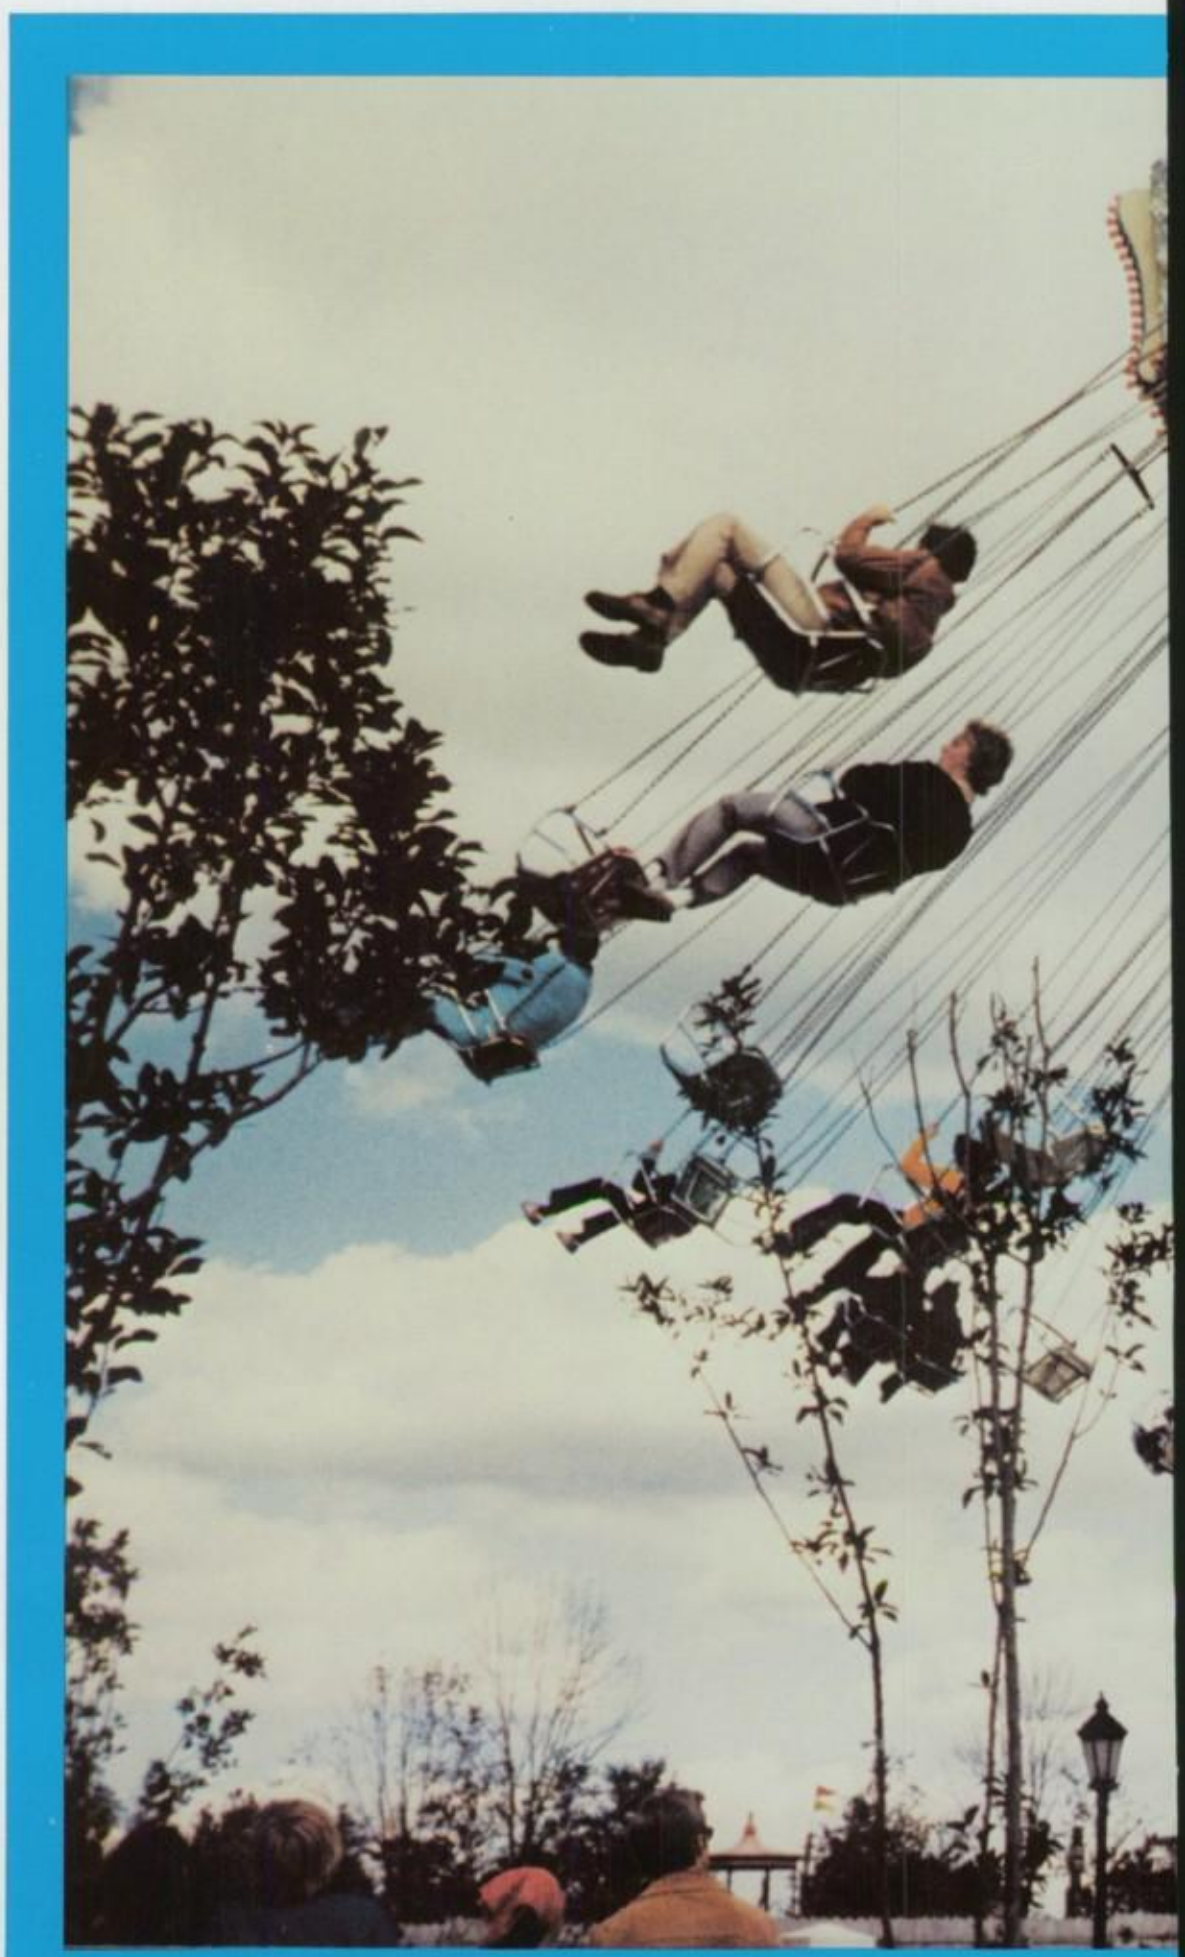
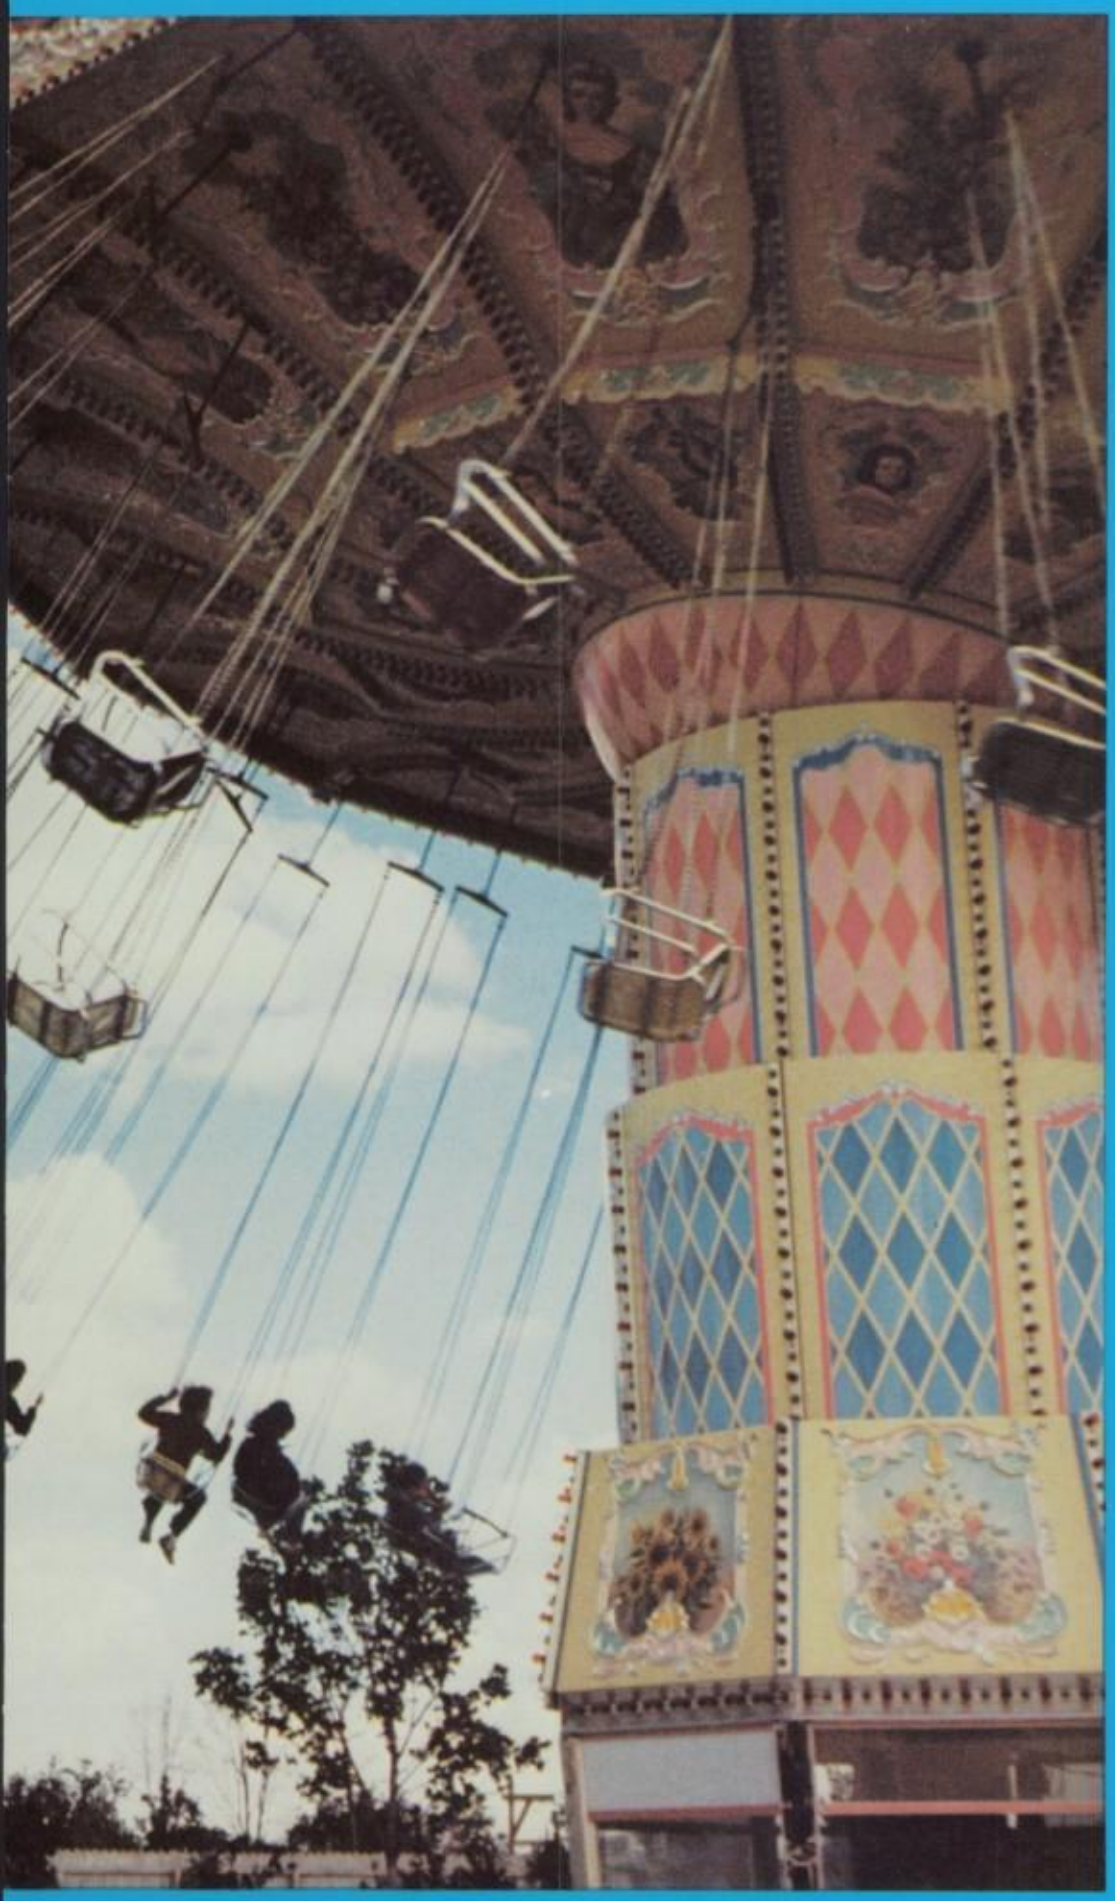
THE SHRILL, PIERCING clamor of the bell signals the end of a long, hard week. Pushing, shoving out the classroom door, navigating to the stairway, I squeeze through the mass of students like a mouse squirming through a crack in the wall. Packed between people, jammed against the railing, glaring at the back of the unknown person blocking my narrow path, I reach the stairwell, only to be drowned by the deafening bustle which chatters, claps, and echoes in my head.

I fall through the doors caught up in a roaring cascade of books, down jackets, and bodies which ebbs out like a flowing stream on my way home.





(Franchini)

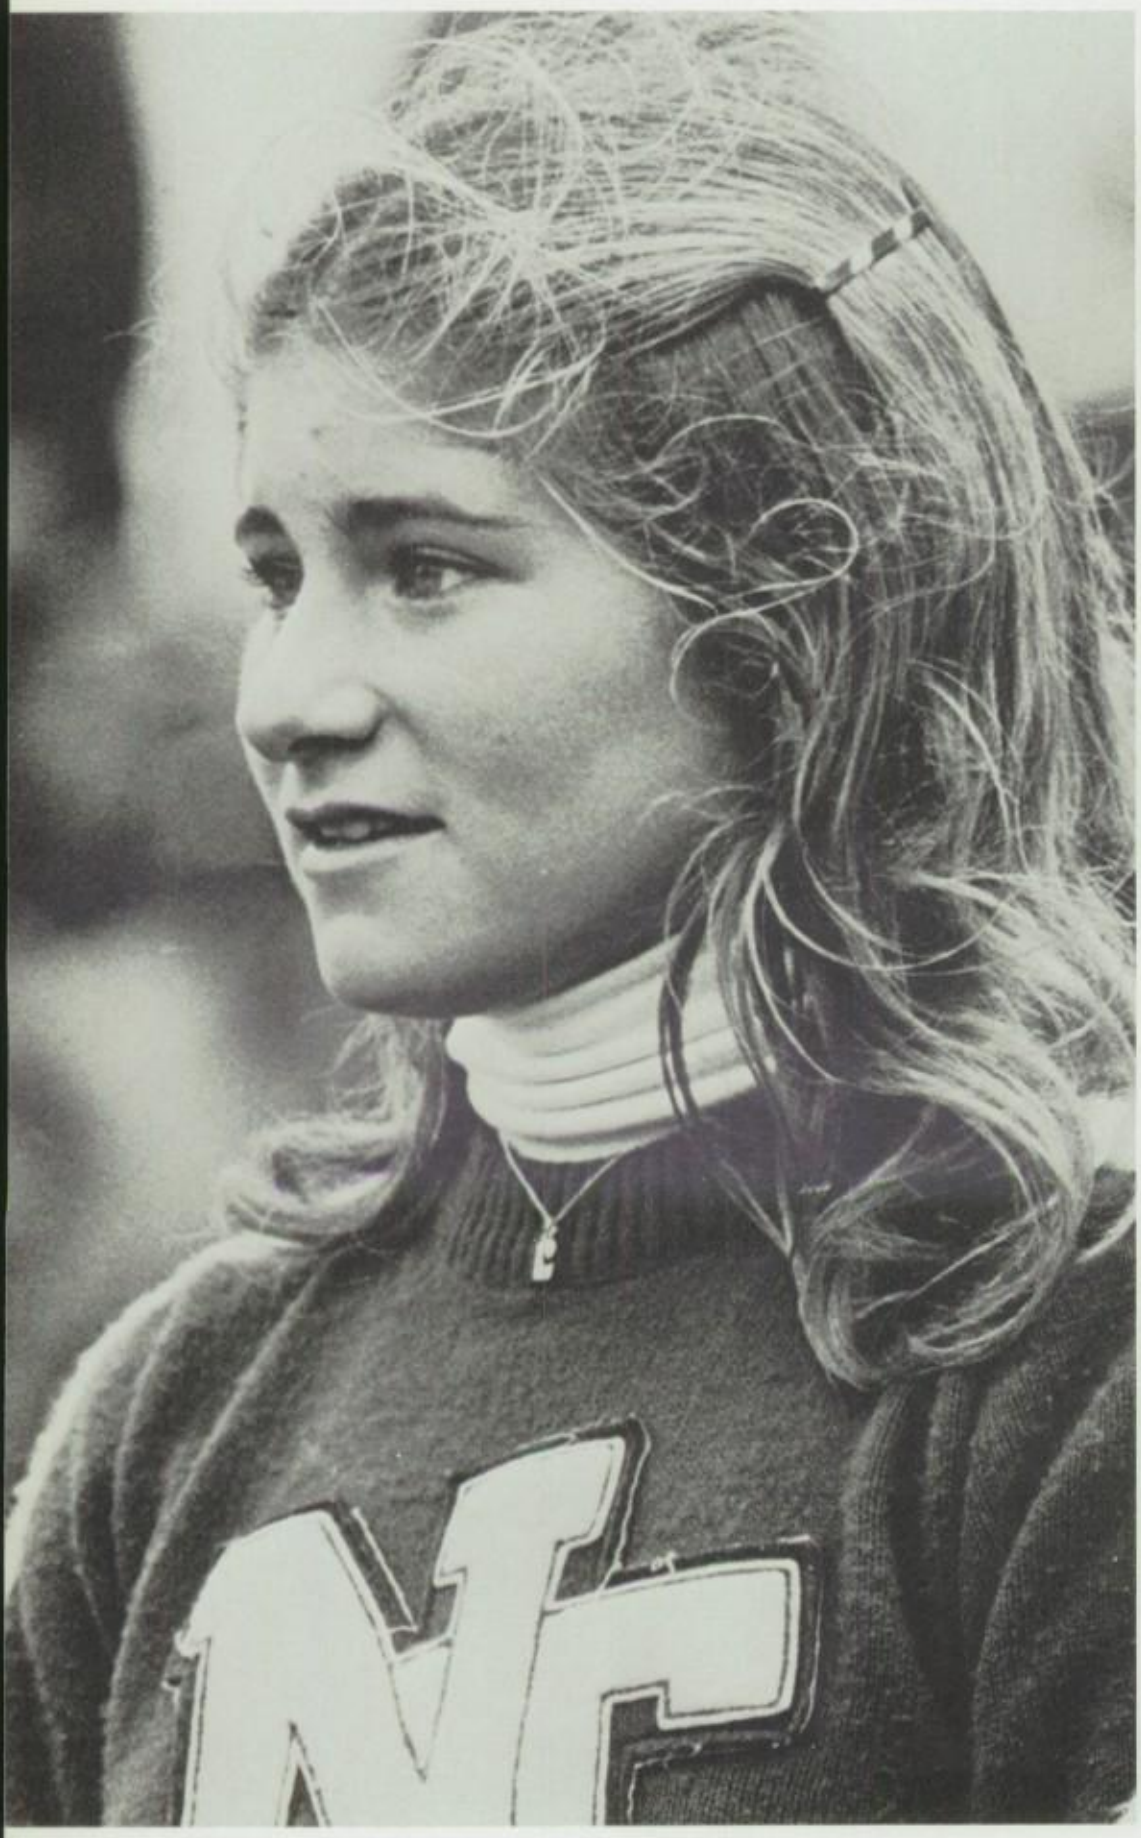
Two days of complete freedom! I scuttle down the sidewalk; the cement becomes hard packed snow swishing beneath the rush of my skis. Weaving down the slope, I swing into a flying halt before the steps of the house and bound up to the door. Dumping my books in the corner, I dash for the kitchen and pull a can of Coke out of the refrigerator, crack the metal tab, and slump down in my chair to stare at a blaring television which wipes memories of the school week out of my mind. The telephone rings, and I answer to the weekend.

"If I could do the last four years over again, I would do them exactly the same way. I learned from every mistake and disappointment. School has really been a maturing experience for me."

"New Trier generates positive feelings in my mind."

"I really liked my years at New Trier, but I certainly welcome the chance to leave. A fifth year would be death."

"In retrospect, I inevitably had to go through it all to get where I am now."



"Nobody can complain about the vast spectrum of organizations, clubs, and sports opportunities that are at our disposal! There's something for anyone who wants it."

"I finally realized that there is a lot more to life than just hanging out with the right crowd and trying to be popular."

"After experiencing the ultimate shock of being accepted at my first choice college, I feel very pleased with the background New Trier gave me."

"The function of the university is not simply to teach bread-winning, or to furnish teachers for the public schools or to be a centre of polite society; it is, above all, to be the organ of that fine adjustment between real life and the growing knowledge of life, an adjustment which forms the secret of civilization."

Scattered footprints of an ending day.
The soft breezes ease a lone sailboat back to shore.
The bow breaks through each wave and swell,

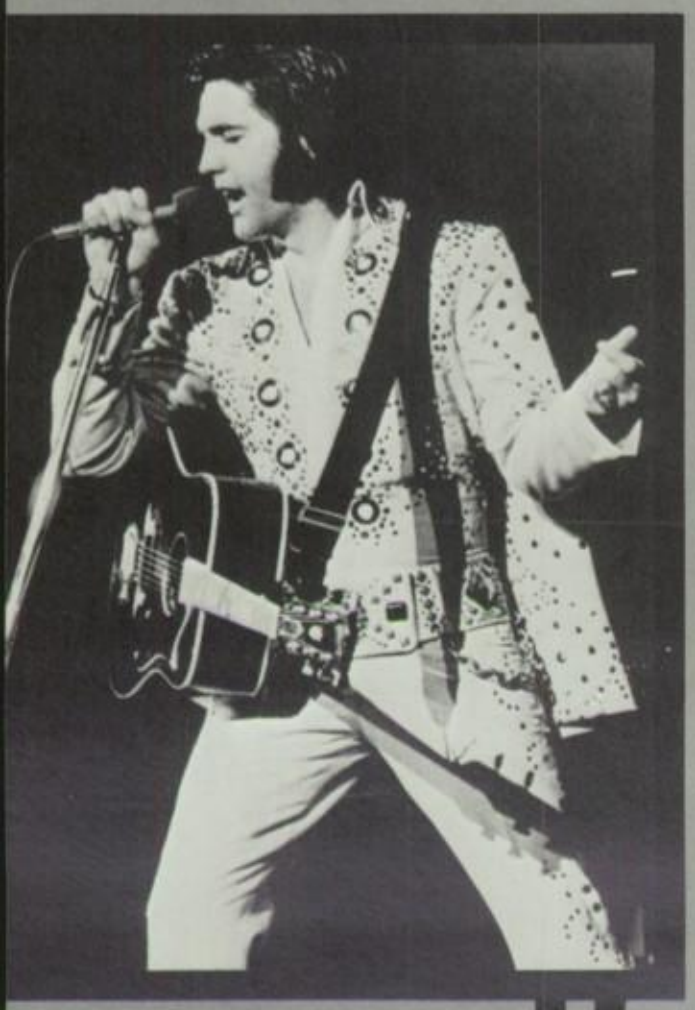
THE PERSONALITY of the year 1977 was shaped by a wide variety of national and international events. On the domestic scene, President Jimmy Carter completed his first year in office, receiving both praise and criticism for his performance as chief executive. The apparently inseparable problems of energy, inflation, and unemployment again demanded much time, but were essentially left unsolved.

Bert Lance resigned as Budget director amidst much controversy and allegations of improprieties. Senator Hubert Humphrey, one of America's greatest political leaders in terms of both popularity and achievement, died after a courageous bout with cancer.

President Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Begin of Israel met together for a series of historic negotiations, thereby ending open hostility in favor of genuine steps towards peace.

The United States and Russia were again challenged with the question of nuclear arms limitation when SALT I expired early this year. America also experienced tension with the Panamanians concerning future involvement of the United States in the Panama Canal.

Even without a war and Watergate, there was still much news to talk about in 1977-78.



George Willig, a toy maker by trade but a mountain climber at heart, climbs up the sheer face of New York's World Trade Center in 1977. The year of 1977 brought the loss of two kings in the music business with the deaths of both Bing Crosby and Elvis Presley. (Photos by Associated Press)

"OKAY, ARE ALL the advisory reps here? Great! First, we got the final figures from the Pumpkin sale, and we made over $950 for scholarships. Also, we collected over 20,000 cans for Chicago's Erie house during the Charity drive with Tri-ship. Good work! Oh, and speaking of work, thanks to all the girls who stuffed and sold hotdogs at the home football games. The Usher corps will meet at 7:00 in the usual place, and all Freshmen helpers are to stay after today. Right, now remember to really push your advisories to fill their stockings. So, let's get to work!"

Girls' club president Jan Armstrong made many such announcements during a year devoted to fulfilling school and community commitments. The profits from the Pumpkin sale and Magazine drive enabled Girls' club to provide more scholarships than ever before. The Fall charity drive and Spring-o-rama were among the club's charitable activities. With the Job board, Freshmen helpers, and the reorganized Girls usher corps, the club sponsored more interschool activities for students. With the help of new Faculty sponsor Mrs. Judith Brinton and a hard working board, Girls' club experienced a successful year of fun and prosperity.

FOUNDED ON THE IDEALS of fellowship sportsmanship, and citizenship, Tri-ship aimed to benefi both the school and community. Tri-ship raised money fo scholarships and other worthy causes. As a servic organization, it gave New Trier students the opportunity t participate in school events while providing services for th community.

Under the leadership of President Tom Curtiss and new Faculty sponsor Terence Barton, Tri-ship had a fiscally successful year. The Homecoming concert, featuring "Sgt Pepper's Beatles Fantasy show," proved both entertaining and profitable as the concert netted a record $2,000. An enlarged Christmas tree sale, arranged by board members Mark Hosbein and Andy East, sold 2,600 trees with the help of 200 volunteers. With the addition of the Spring concert Tri-ship earned $10,000 for senior boys' scholarships.

The service end of Tri-ship provided charity for the Erie house in Chicago by sponsoring a canned food drive; with the help of Girls' club, the drive yielded 20,000 cans. In May both organizations entertained 40 inner-city kids in the annual Spring-o-rama. Whether they served as ushers salesmen, can counters, or representatives, Tri-ship members got involved in the New Trier community.

Meeting demands

IT IS 10TH PERIOD. Student council president Peter Kendall calls the meeting to order. Gradually, the noise in the Faculty dining room subsides. The first item of business is introduced. Ideas are passed back and forth by legislative board members and advisory representatives.

Comments? Criticisms?" SC president Peter Kendall casually keeps a representative meeting in order. (Photos by Emerson)

A COMMITTEE IS FORMED to investigate the situation in greater depth. Then various committee heads report on the progress of their groups. More problems are discussed. Plans are made for an upcoming SC social event. At the sound of the 11th period bell, the meeting is adjourned.

Thus, Student council went about its work of improving New Trier. Among SC's major tasks this year were the renovation of the student lounge, the beautification of the cafeteria, and the prevention of book thefts from the library. Over $3,000 raised in the past four flea markets provided Council with ample funds for their projects.

THE EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES committee provided New Trier students with special events during free periods and after school which they could both learn from and enjoy. The new ideas for this year included Dance week teaching exotic dancing styles, a GM assembly displaying new advances in science, and movies during lunch periods.

A change of pace

THE FACADE OF red brick walls and snow-covered paths remained unaltered. In fact, to the outside observer New Trier East appeared no different on EFFE day 1978 than on any other school day. Yet once inside, a dramatic change had obviously taken place. Overnight, New Trier's structured atmosphere had become relaxed and informal as teachers, guest speakers, and students partook in a unique exchange of learning and teaching.

The change which was most appealing to the students was the break EFFE offered from the daily routine. Students who just a few days earlier had been cramming for finals now came to school with grades out of mind and a day of fun and learning ahead. And with no course requirements to worry about, students who may have felt stifled in regular history or English courses now could branch out into Jungian psychology, Vonnegut, Appalachian culture, and South Africa.

For the student who wanted to leave the academic scene entirely, an impressive array of field trips was offered including excursions to a brewery and Wilmot's ski slopes. The between-semester change of pace EFFE brought to New Trier was the product of seven hard-working committees under the direction of Faculty sponsor Diane Stoewer and student co-ordinator Jeff Holland.

THROUGH THE AFS Americans Abroad program, a select group of students are able to travel to other countries as far away in culture as in mileage. Upon arrival they may encounter initial prejudices and communication barriers, but many of their problems dissolve once they are well acquainted with their temporary families. The students quickly learn to keep an open mind toward exotic foods and unfamiliar customs. They return home having gained first-hand knowledge of other countries, fluency in second languages, and insight into universal human nature.

The American field service at New Trier East welcomed independent visitors and foreign students from a variety of exchange programs to the North Shore. Under second-year president Carla Askonas, the '77-'78 organization focused on offering diversified activities to Americans and foreigners alike. A successful AFS weekend united students of the world for a glimpse of New Trier while International day treated New Trier to a taste of the world.

RESOLVED: that the Federal government should guarantee comprehensive medical care for all citizens in the United States. A long-time topic of national controversy, this resolution provided high school debaters across the country with the opportunity to fully examine both sides of a relevant social issue. This topic area offered a broad spectrum of subjects to debate, ranging from National health insurance to biomedical research.

New Trier debaters began to work on the topic with the Varsity and Junior varsity attending summer institutes at colleges around the country. They continued their research in the fall, spending hours in the library in search of quotations from both well-known and obscure publications to serve as potent weapons in their arsenal of arguments. The team participated in nearly 20 tournaments at high schools and colleges in northern Illinois and co-sponsored the New Trier Open with New Trier West.

HUMAN EMOTIONS WEAVE themselves differently into each person's life, yet every pattern contains similar threads which tie people together. Because of these basic similarities, relationships can be formed even among those who share different lifestyles. By utilizing this philosophy, Social service creates a unique two-way learning process between NTE students and the underprivileged, old, and disabled. Patience, perseverance, and love are the tools used to open communications with a tutee or lonely individual. Occasionally, knots may appear in the fabric of these interactions, but with joint effort, they are usually untangled.

Maintaining a tightly woven organization, Social service board members kept up productive relations with each volunteer throughout the year. They sponsored bake sales, an enormous rummage sale, and a Battle of the Bands to supplement their support from Girls' club and Tri-ship. Involving themselves with in-school activities as well as outside communities, Social service benefited all those who participated.

The spirit of NTE was alive again this year as Pep club,
Headed by President Anne Bovaird and Faculty sponsor Catherine Naro,
Enthusiastically presented the school with a year of participation and change.

Spirit, Pep club's main goal, was not only achieved through the Pom-pon and cheerleading squads, but also by means of Involved board and committee members. Their hard work
Resulted in a fun-filled summer carnival, several spirited brunches,
Impressive Homecoming festivities, and a profitable mitten sale.
These and other successful events kept both the club and the school busy.

Old regulations regarding eligibility and cheerleading tryouts were revised, and the Freshly rewritten constitution opened all areas of Pep club to boys.

Now located in a new, more accessible office, Pep club was better able to bring
The spirit of unity, friendship, and warmth to the school. An abundance of Energy and innovations made this year a great one for Pep club.

The two major functions of Sports service involved th recording of statistics and the teaching of athletics Matmaids, statisticians, and timers were an asset to th various athletic teams. Responsible for following the action of a game and recording all the statistics of the event, thes girls attended all athletic matches throughout the year.

Each week, Guard members spent up to six hours o their free time organizing pool related activities, whic included giving swimming and lifesaving lessons an freeswim supervision. In return for their services, Guar olunteers gained invaluable leadership qualities and eaching experience.

The Gymkana organization provided its own members ith a sense of responsibility and a chance to help others by eading elementary school students through the basic umbling movements and onto gymnastic proficiency. They ave youngsters in the community new insight into an xciting sport.

By channeling their efforts through these various rganizations, hundreds of student volunteers devoted much f their free time to helping their school and their ommunity. Together, they made up a super Sports service.

A handful of clubs

THE REGULAR SCHOOL day ends at 3:30; however, New Trier is far from closed. Another type of school begins at 3:45; New Trier's clubs, ranging from those which stimulate the intellect to those which pursue various hobbies and vocational interests, open their doors to all students. These organizations provide a place to meet others with a common interest and enable their members to expand their knowledge and have an enjoyable time.

Math club presented to interested students the challenge of scholastic improvement through out-of-school math work. Instructing themselves primarily through small groups with assistance from the faculty sponsors, Math club members drilled themselves in progressively tougher problems and concepts. The club prepared all participants for a multitude of interscholastic competitions through worksheets, national contests, and intra-club challenges covering all facets of math.

Bridge club and Chess club gave their members opportunities to sharpen their skills both through relaxing games and through competition. While both clubs participated in state tournaments, the major emphasis of Bridge club was on free play, whereas Chess club stressed competition, as reflected by their intra-club rankings and frequent interscholastic meets.

Conflict simulations club members grouped their forces after school every week to reconstruct, on game boards, many of the significant battles in the history of the world. Ranging from Waterloo to World War II conflicts, "Wargamers" let students match their wits against each other and against history.

FOR THE OUT-OF-DOORS type student, Hosteling club offered students a variety of excursions, including rock-climbing, hiking, bicycling, cross-country skiing and camping excursions at places like Devil's lake, Winnetka woods, and Kettle Morraine South.

Biology club was the most diverse natural science club of the school. Its members discussed veterinary medicine, cardiology, unidentified flying objects, and wilderness survival with experts in those fields. The club visited the Botanic gardens, the Indiana dunes, and the Field museum and had a detailed tour of Michael Reese hospital.

Ecology club members showed their interest in preserving our environment. After gathering information from speakers and literature regarding numerous environmental problems, members planned appropriate ecological action, such as a can recycling campaign and a clean-up of the Skokie Lagoons' shoreline.

Astronomy club was the ideal organization for students interested in the stars and the history of the universe. The club heard lectures and organized discussions on stars, black holes, galaxies and other astronomical phenomena.

The Science fiction club brought students together to discuss stories and ideas regarding the universe. Members attended a science fiction convention in Chicago and ran a science fiction mini-convention with the Astronomy club.

FORENSICS CLUB OFFERED participants chances to improve their voices and/or manners in front of an audience and to perform in competition. Members competed in radio speaking, verse and prose reading, and humorous acting.

Students interested in collecting and discussing stamps attended the monthly meetings of stamp club and also various stamp shows outside of school.

THE LANGUAGE department also offered a variety of extracurricular activities. Latin club members went to the Lyric Opera and organized the Roman banquet. Both Latin club and German club organized student publications in their languages: Praeco and Schreiberei, respectively.

The business department offered co-curricular activities to those anxious to compete and to improve their skills in business and business relations. Distributive education clubs, of America (DECA), an activity open to students enrolled in Cooperative Occupational Education/Retailing, emphasized management principles and practices. Office education association (OEA), a recent addition to New Trier's clubs, was an activity for students enrolled in Cooperative Occupational Education-/Office Occupations and emphasized business skills. Both clubs helped members find afternoon jobs and competed interscholastically in their various divisions at local, state, and national levels.

For those students who had difficulty in courses, the Student tutoring club matched interested students with tutors during free periods for individual assistance in nearly all subject areas. Tutoring helped the tutee, and it also gave a sense of satisfaction to the tutor.

DOWN

QTR.

THE VARSITY GOT off to an unfortunately slow start after losing their first two games of the season. Injuries to 12 prominent starters aggravated the situation. Overcoming these early difficulties, the Indians went on to trounce their next three opponents.

In their pressure packed Homecoming confrontation with Deerfield, the return of Co-captain Steve Bianucci enhanced the Indian effort; Deerfield, which was destined to go downstate, came away with a mere 10-7 victory. In the battle against New Trier West, the Indians held the Cowboys to 12 points and emerged victorious. The gridders went on to triumph over Evanston for the third consecutive year, but this win was even more significant because it frustrated the Wildkits' playoff hopes.

Ending 6-3 for the season and second in the North division, the Indians had become a powerful unit in spite of its early setbacks. Outstanding performances by Pete DiClementi, the CSL's top scorer and NTE's most valuable player, led the offensive corps. A hard-hitting defensive line including Ken Golder, Duffy Volkmann, and Mike Gorman, backed them up, and together they formed a team worthy of recognition.

THE UNDERCLASS ranks achieved one of their most rewarding years in recent history. The sophomores captured the CSL crown with an outstanding 8-0-1 record. Michael Bianucci and Eric Canafax led the offense which mustered over 20 points per game. The sound, close-knit defense enforced by Bo Hediger and Kevin Coyl held opponents to an aver age of one touchdown pe game.

The ever-tough Fresh man teams held strong fo yet another mighty season The A's earned a mark of si and two which include three shutouts. The impres sive 7-1 record of the B tean was attributed to their har work and depth of talent This fine Varsity potentia is the root of a New Trie East football program whic will blossom in the future.

Heading downstate

IN THE HEAT of mid-summer the coach's whistle interrupts the pre-practice scrimmage. The command "Two laps!" rings out as the Varsity soccer team takes off around Duke Childs field. Strenuous workouts lasted from the swelter of late August through the chill of mid-November, as 12 newcomers and eight returning lettermen formed a team destined for the State playoffs.

To secure a spot in the State finals, the Indians had to first capture their section by beating Wheeling, Forest View, and arch rival New Trier West. The explosive booter offense, led by top scorer Tom Williams and all-Stater Bert Sullivan, helped the Indians defeat the Cowboys 1-0, sending them on their way to their first appearance in the State finals. The Indians' downstate trip was cut short, however, when the booters lost to defending State champs Granite City South, 2-1.

Nevertheless, the Indians presented Granite City with tough opposition, including superior performances by all-Stater Dan Butler and defenders David Dickey and Owen Curtis. Boasting a final record of 17-2-2, the dream of heading downstate came true.

AFTER A BLAZING opening, the JV team suffered a disappointing week of three losses. Nevertheless the booters ended their season on an upward swing with an easy victory over Highland Park and a season record of 5-3-1. Coach Earl Schable complimented the JV team as having "a lot of talent and confidence."

The Sophomore soccer team had a very successful year, boasting the first undefeated season in 13 years. After capturing the Central suburban league title with a 14-0-2 record, the Sophomore booters went on to win a seven team tournament at Glenbrook North. Praised by Coach Bob Ward as a team with talent, depth, and potential, the team promises strong Varsity performance next year.

Bright individual performances and high potential highlighted the developing Freshman A and B teams. However, constant shifts detracted from their competitive abilities in the CSL.

Sweeping the field

WITH HANDS clenched tightly around their sticks, the team awaits the beginning of play. Backed by a season of strenuous workouts and hard-fought battles, Coach Margie Ambrose's last minute strategy is firmly implanted in their minds. At the shrill sound of the whistle, the Indians spring into action like arrows shot from drawn bows. The team's decisive capture of the Inter-suburban league crown has enabled them to compete in this Sectional finals match with New Trier West. On the field, they exhibit the same tight defense and explosive offense which has carried them through a 12-0 season.

BUT NTW proves a tough opponent. Quick scuffles that occur in front of the goals prove fruitless as the game ends in a scoreless deadlock. The outcome will now be decided by penalty shots; but before the tie is broken, NTE is called on a technicality, and West wins by default. Despite this upsetting defeat, the team displayed the skillful brand of field hockey which has produced five undefeated teams in the last six years.

Birds of a feather

SINCE THE PRIMITIVE days of badminton, the "battledore" has evolved into the racket, the "shuttlecock" into the birdie, and the old children's game into a swift, competitive sport requiring great skill and control. Continuing this spirit of advancement, New Trier has established the sport as one of the important outlets for an emerging generation of girl athletes.

The 1978 badminton team, with five sophomores and only two returning Varsity players, was young and inexperienced. Nevertheless, the team aspired to a high position in their conference, due to its enthusiasm, flexibility, and willingness to work. Looking towards State, Coach Lee Kennicke hoped to get the top two singles players, Alicia Cannon and Jami Harris, and at least one of the doubles pairs into the competition.

Par-fectionists

HER FRAME STRETCHING to its utmost limits, the golfer sweeps her arms back slowly, then drives them rapidly through the ball. It takes off on target, achieving a perfect arc, rocketing over yards of fairway. Dropping, it finds the green, spinning to a stop six feet from the pin...

Excellent performances highlighted the Girls' golf season. Despite limited competitive experience and many newcomers, Coach Gerry Ryberg welded a cohesive unit capable of producing low scores. Senior Lisa Howard served as the mainstay of the team, displaying the ability, skill, and consistency to earn her a trip downstate. Sophomore Sarah Wheeler, scoring in the low 50's, proved to be one of the most promising of the underclass players, while freshmen Beth Spray and Sharon Regan also contributed fine showings to the Varsity effort. Finishing fourth in the District, the team gained experience which should assist in next year's quest for the league championship.

...CROUCHED WITH DETERMINATION, the golfer draws his putter back with a fluid motion; the blade starts down and strikes the ball firmly, sending it smoothly toward the cup. "Click." The white sphere drops for yet another birdie. A clenched fist punches the air; New Trier East has triumphed again.

The efforts of the Varsity golf team paved the way to a State championship in Springfield, their first in 10 years. Coasting through the regular season with an unblemished record of 11-0, the team captured the Central suburban league and District titles. District medalist Greg Spray, fellow senior Jim Kaplan, junior Rich Synek, and sophomore Mike De Bartolo consistently contributed scores of par or under, while Peter Lawler and John Donahoe provided the depth necessary for a strong squad.

The Freshman-sophomore team, led by Hank Zanarini and Jay Dempsey, also maintained a high standard of play. With an undefeated season, the underclass golfers took the CSL title, thus continuing the winning tradition at New Trier East.

ON ANY GIVEN winter night, a stranger venturing into the Winnetka ice arena might witness the sights and sounds of the world's fastest sport, ice hockey. During practices, the voice of Indian coach Rick Sloan would hardly be heard above slapping sticks and players crashing the boards. On game nights, these characteristic sounds would be supplemented by the roar of avid NTE fans.

Followers of the hockey squad had much to cheer about this season. Skating smoothly through the regular season, the icers posted a record of 22-3-3 and captured the Chicago Metro north division title. Five players, including co-captains Bert Sullivan, Steve Skalla, and Peter Lawler, as well as junior Gary Martin and sophomore Chip Kenyon, received division All-star honors. Although not achieving their ultimate goal, the State championship, the squad's outstanding record remains a noteworthy accomplishment.

WITH A STATE performance which surpassed all expectations, the Girls' swimming team achieved the most rewarding season of their brief history at New Trier. Spurred on by veterans as well as by underclassmen, the team attained an outstanding second place finish in the State meet. Superb efforts by sophomore Mary James in butterfly, junior Anne Ward in freestyle, and senior Laurie Guthrie in diving were indicative of the drive the swimmers possessed as they trampled competition in pre-state clashes. Undefeated with 10 wins in their dual meet season, the Indians breezed to first place finishes in league and District competition. With stars from this year's strong Junior varsity joining the returning Varsity stalwarts, the swimmers have an even better chance for capturing the State next season.

Life in the fast lane

THE SWIMMER'S DAY begins early: at 6:30 he takes his first icy plunge into the water. By the time most people are arriving at school, he has just finished a grueling workout. After school practices add to this strain, especially on notorious "stress days." Leaving school at 6 p.m., he has registered over 10,000 yards.

Vacations are only a time for more intense training, increasing endurance and speed. The swimmer dedicates a large part of his life to the strenuous work necessary to become a star athlete.

The Boys' swimming team entered a new spring season this year, balancing the boys' year with the girls'. Despite this change, the perennially strong squad was hardly affected. Returning State meet qualifiers Jeff Porter, Pat McDivitt, Tedd Erickson, and Bob James proved invaluable as the green wave dominated the Central suburban league. Coach Eric Matz pointed to the source of the team's success: "These boys have been working hard, and have been working hard for a long time."

The expertise and precision of the diving squad complemented the excellence of the entire swimming team. Under the direction of Coach Arnie Cajet, senior George Klauke and junior Joe Nash spearheaded the Indian attack.

Out to lunge

GAINING VALUABLE EXPERIENCE in success as well as in disappointment, the 1978 New Trier fencing team laid the foundations for a bright future. Ending a bittersweet season of five wins and five losses, the team finished fourth in the Varsity Intersuburban meet and attained a third place tie at the State tournament. Seniors Dan Cohen, Ben van Amerongen, and junior Arthur Bebak, under the direction of first year coach Mike Phelan, grew in talent to become the stars of the team. Despite the loss of their seniors, the Varsity is expected to return next year almost completely intact, able to take full advantage of their competitive experience.

With stars like Stefan James leading the Freshman-Sophomore fencers to an impressive record of eight wins and two losses, Coach Phelan expressed great satisfaction in the team's play. The underclass foilsmen are expected to add depth to next year's formidable Varsity.

CONTRIBUTING MUCH to the recent development of girls' sports at New Trier, the Basketball team continued its growth aided by an expanded season and an enlarged coaching staff. Co-captains Martha Hopkins and Nancy Rebarchak, both in their fourth year of Varsity play, led the team to a second place tie in the Conference with key baskets, rebounds, and steals. Implementing new strategies, including a "triangle-in-two" defense and a strong passing game to provide openings for talented outside shooters, the squad found success in aggressive offensive and defensive play.

Coach Gerry Ryberg was enthusiastic about all aspects of the program, especially the extension of basketball at the freshman level. Younger players gained experience, sharpenipg their skills under competitive conditions and assuring the continuance of the high level of performance established by this year's team.

Green giants

IN THE CAPABLE hands of veteran Coach John Schneiter, the New Trier East basketball program invariably turns out disciplined and exciting teams. This year's squad was no exception. Featuring four starters taller than 6'3" and particularly outstanding guards, the Varsity anticipated a winning season. Though not quite meeting their expectations, the first half of the season provided the experience necessary to turn the team around for a stellar effort as they approached the State tournament.

THE TEAM'S STEADY improvement hinged upon the quick penetration and accomplished ball-handling of guards Steve Rohner and Brad Pierce as well as the multiple talents of forwards John Donahoe, Bill Peters, and center Tony Lehman. They mastered precision passes, setting up an awesome inside game that freed outside shooters and comprising what Schneiter described as "the best offense I've had in my 15 years as coach at NTE."

Throughout the season, the team exhibited exceptional poise, pulling off wins in high-pressure games against arch rivals Evanston and New Trier West and bringing an impressive league record into the Regional competition against our sister school. The Indians completely dominated this crucial game, the winner of which was almost assured a trip downstate. Scenting victory, they entered the final minutes with a comfortable lead, but miraculously the Cowboys rallied to tie the score. A sense of utter frustration sank in on East's side as West's Joel May, amidst much confusion, tipped in the winning basket. As the final seconds ticked away, the stadium was a mix of two extreme reactions: the hysteria of an ecstatic blue crowd and the silence of a mystified green one. It seemed the Indians had all the ingredients for a championship team this year, but fate wasn't on their side.

ASPIRING TO THE excellence of the Varsity, the Freshman and Sophomore teams won their respective league titles while the JV squad took third place in a very competitive division. One key to this all-around success was the integration of the entire basketball program, including intensive summer training that allowed Coach Schneiter to evaluate the players prior to the regular season. Because all teams use the same patterned fast-break offense, each member gains in-depth knowledge of Indian strategy by the time he reaches Varsity status. This kind of tight organization formed the basis for Schneiter's prediction that "there's going to be good solid basketball at New Trier in the future."

WRESTLING IS A SPORT that requires hard work, endurance, and skill, but above all it is a sport that stresses individual contribution. Individual accomplishments combined to forge a final season record of 11-6-1, while as a team the wrestlers took on projects such as a candy drive that raised $1000 for much-needed equipment.

Grappling their way through a gritty schedule, the Varsity season was highlighted by an upset victory over league champions Niles East and a triumph over rival New Trier West. Assured of a second place finish in the Central suburban league, the wrestlers, led by Duffy Volkmann, Hal Krause, and Pat Potts steamrolled to the fourth position in the District meet and from there to an impressive tenth place in the sectionals. Most valuable player Hal Krause's second place in the tournament qualified him for a final State competition, despite the severe handicap of a hyperextended elbow.

The JV and Freshman teams also made fine showings in the 1978 season. The JV team achieved a seas record of 11-6, with su undefeated players as P Gonnoud, Bill Buechn and Rick Rafanello. Thou crippled by the graduati of six Varsity players, t coaches are of the opini that next year's team w not be overcome by t handicap.

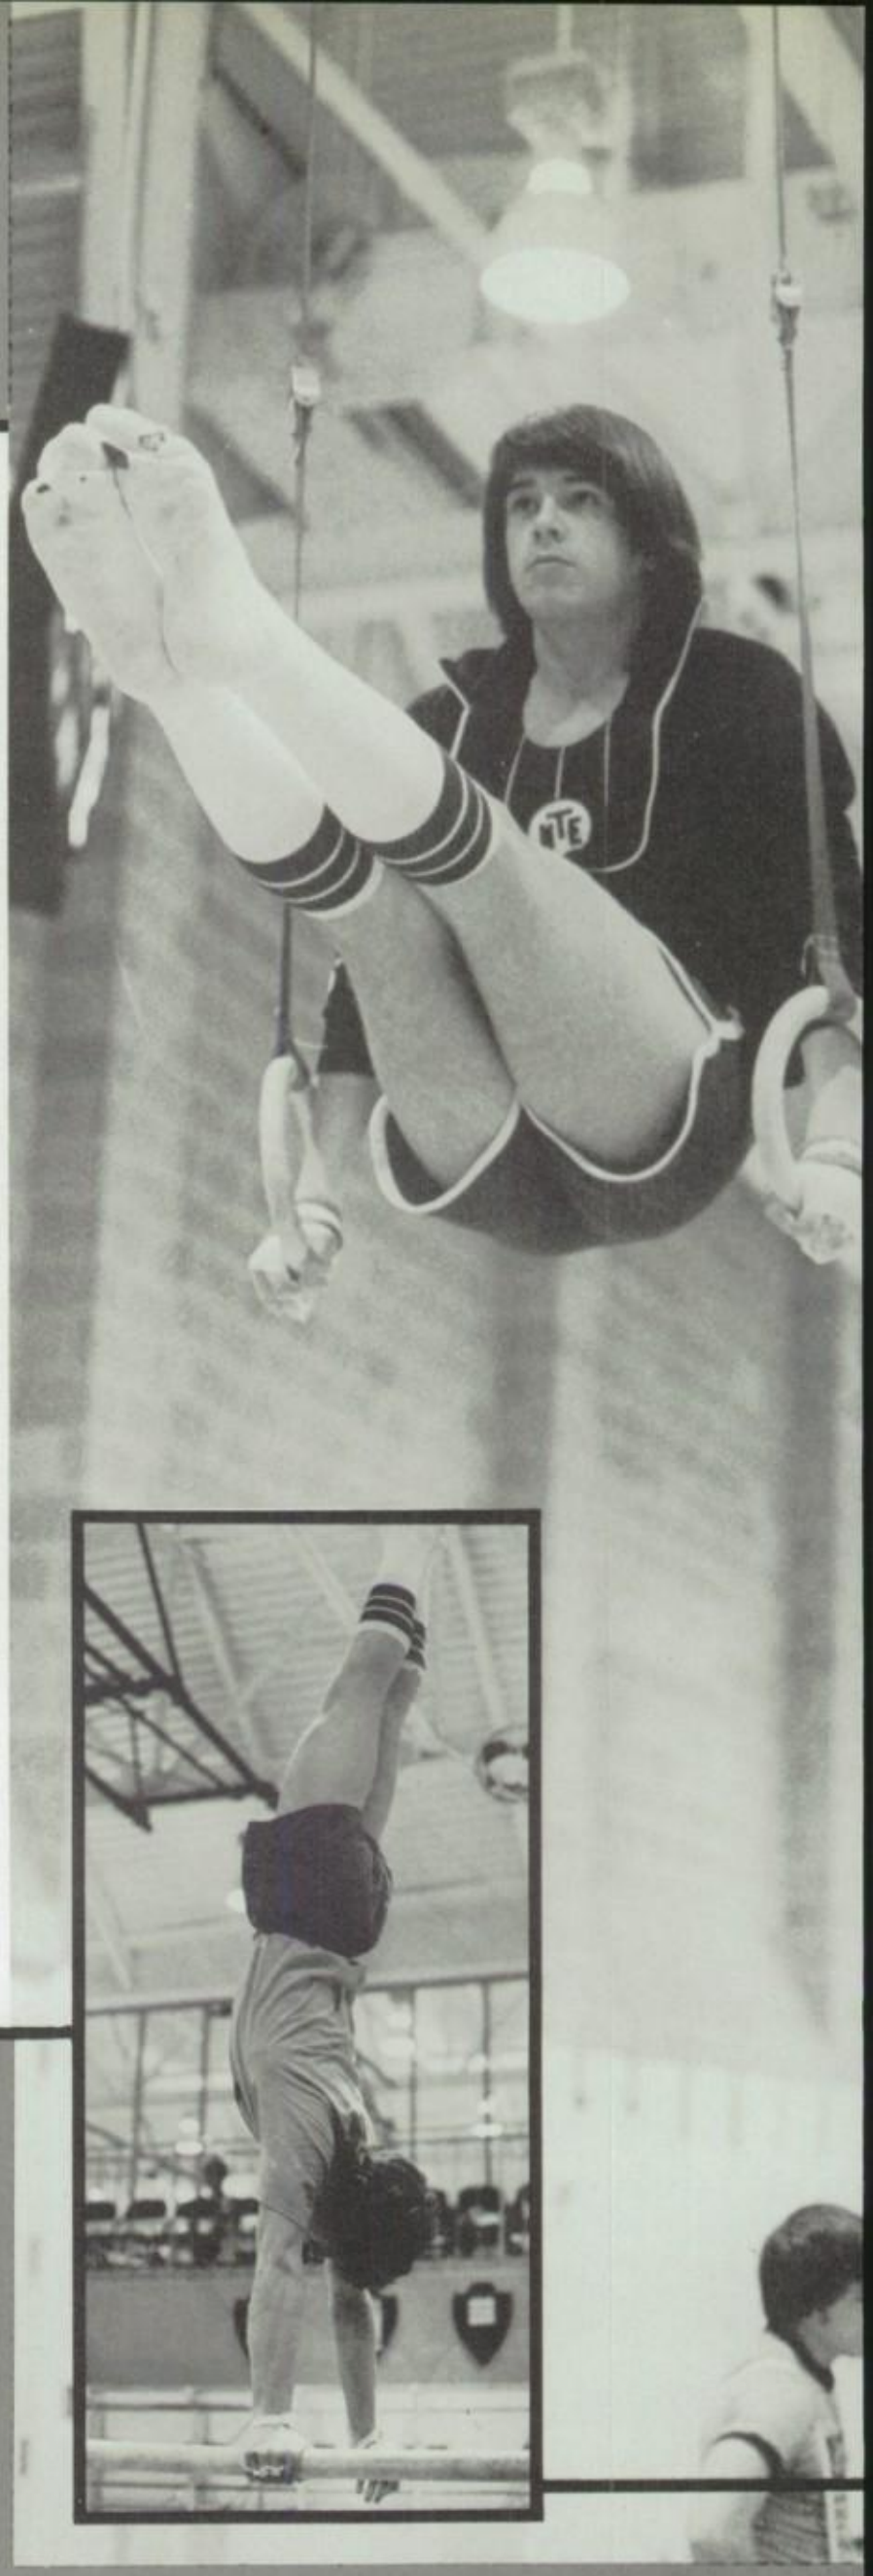
Flipside



IN GYMNASTICS, every ounce of energy injected into a routine can make an essential difference, and every tenth of a point is significant. The 1978 Gymnastics squad's attention to such detail was responsible for the dramatic 22-point difference between their first meet and their final one. The team showed true flexibility in adjusting to changes in IHSA policy and to a schedule that included only four home meets.

Eugene Lin, Barry Bischoff, Joel Fisch, and John Jiganti were among the senior standouts who led the Varsity to a distinguished record of 10 wins and four losses. Although disappointed by a series of bad breaks during the sectional meet, Coach Gerald Denk was pleased with the team's third place finish in a divison of consistently tough competition.

Green beams

STRIVING FOR BOTH grace and precision, the gymnast attempts to combine athletic and dance skills in her performance. Rallying under the encouragement of Coach Darlene Kluka, the Girls' gymnastics team managed to accomplish this feat with much success. Their finesse on the beam, uneven bars, and vault was especially apparent in the exceptional scores of co-captains Cathy James, Nancy Kindig, Ann Thompson, and Kathy Whitman.

Producing depth in all areas of competition, the quality of the squad rose to its highest level in recent years and raised hopes for qualifying individuals for the State meet. The outstanding talent which characterized the gymnastics program compelled Coach Kluka to summarize the team as "one of the finest in the Central suburban league."

Living on the fault line

WITH THE COMPETITIVE fires burning toward excellence, the Girls' tennis team welded another link in their chain of impressive seasons. Sparked by the doubles teams of Sally Solberg-Betsy Stogin and Juliet Naft-Melanie Harris, the netters forged a perfect record of 7-0 in conference play and captured first place in the Central suburban league.

Although all of the Varsity starters qualified for the state meet, the team received an unfortunate draw. Nevertheless, their third place finish in that competition provided a fitting climax to a fine season. One explanation for the Indians' success was the small size of the team, allowing Coach Mary Jo Herzog to spend more time improving the skills of each individual. The girls practiced diligently at developing their play, drilling every day after school.

The Junior varsity also had a superb season, finishing first in the league. The strength of this team combined with the experience of several returning starters will guarantee a formidable defense of the CSL title in coming seasons.

THE 1977 THINCLADS started their season on the right foot. Despite the loss of last year's senior stars, the emergence of unforeseen junior talent gave Coach Ben Almaguer hope for a promising finish in the season-long race for a league championship.

Unfortunate injuries to top runners Vinnie Collins and Bill Frank, however, slowed the pace midway through the year. Even so, the athletes finished with an 8-3 record built around the fine performances of Bill Jewett, Kevin Conran, and Jeff Ubben.

A wave of enthusiasm swept through the freshman and sophomore ranks as they rolled to easy victories throughout their season. Their steady wins and high scores gave hope of a championship for future Varsity squads that misfortune denied in 1977.

Star Trak

The secret to the success of the 1978 Boys' track team lay in their enthusiasm and commitment, as well as their ability as athletes. A spirited atmosphere was prevalent throughout the entire track season, from the strenuous workouts to the final strides that broke the victory tape.

Born to run

WITH VIGOROUS DETERMINATION, the Girls' track team set their long-distance goals and paced themselves to meet them. Jumping into the season with optimism and alacrity, the squad entered a new phase of practice that included rigorous daily training and well-organized co-ed workout sessions with its sister squad from New Trier West. The team used its greater discipline to develop proficiency in individual and group events, with all levels of age and ability combined into one Varsity squad.

Two new coaches, Charles Schulz and his assistant, William Stewart, brought a fresh sense of enthusiasm and enjoyment to the 1978 season. The change and vivacity of the year sparked hopes for the opportunity to qualify for the Conference championships and the State tournament.

WITH AN UNPRECEDENTED number of returning starters, the 1978 New Trier baseball team promised to prove one of the finest in years. Their statistics alone provide an accurate measure of the team's strength. Paced by the devastating batting of co-captains David Cook (.448 summer batting average), Ray Mals (.400), and Jon Cullen (.391), as well as seniors Brad Cloud (.333) and Chris Smith (.344), the Indians posted a solid '77 summer season record of 18-4.

The strong pitching of Cook, Mals, and junior Barney Schaefer and the team's outstanding .965 fielding average were invaluable aids to the success of the team. Gaining experience in as many as 90 games in the past year, and practicing their skills throughout the winter months, New Trier's batsmen prepared long and hard for the spring season.

LACROSSE IS A unique sport that combines the endurance of soccer, the roughness of football, and the quickness of hockey. It is also unique in that few high schools in Illinois have lacrosse teams. At NTE, however, the sport continues to grow in popularity and participation. Because of the relative lack of competition within the state, the team had to venture to Ohio and New York, making impressive showings in both annual tournaments.

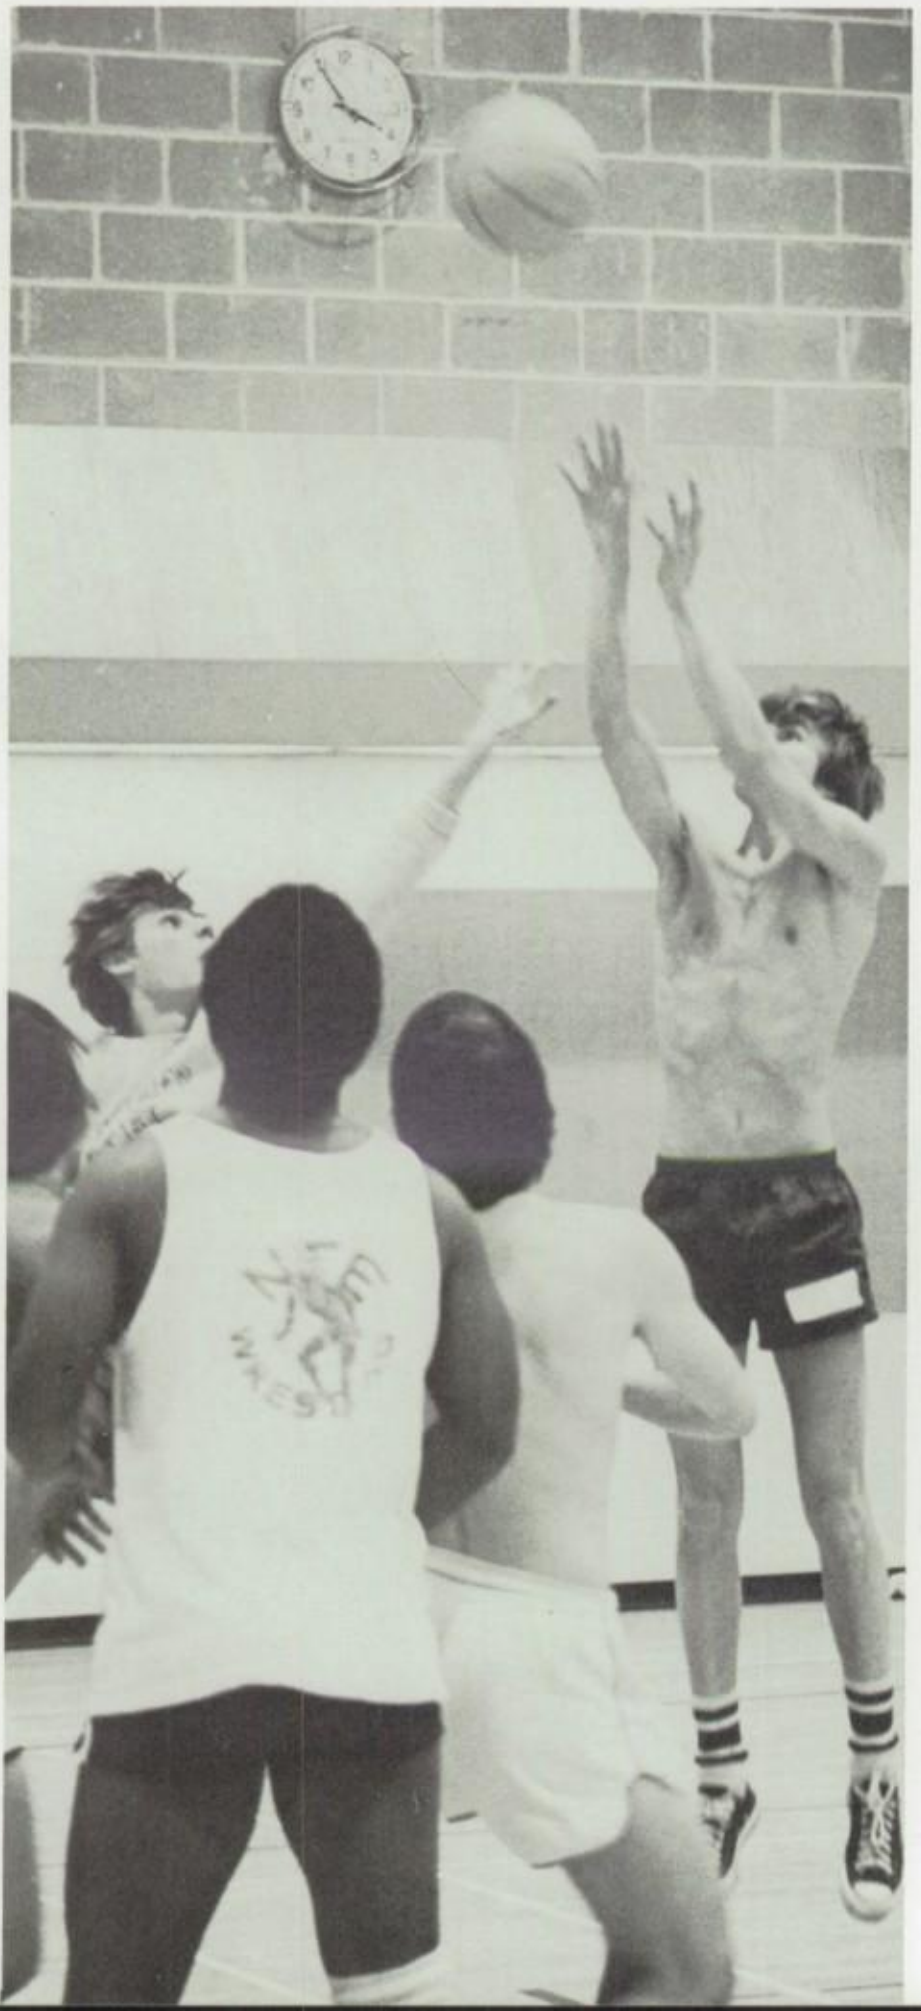
Fun in games



DESIGNED AS AN organization to supplement the interscholastic sports program, Intramurals provided students with an outlet for their athletic desires. IM offered such new events as a horseback outing and a racquetball tournament, as well as improved recreation nights which sported a more diversified program. In addition to these innovations, IM held many traditional events, including the Hearts tournament and the Tom Nesbit Memorial basketball game.

Board members kept u with the demands of Title I by offering more co-e sports, such as tenni basketball, volleyball, an track. The IM board strov to bring relations with Ne Trier West closer by holdin inter-campus champio ships in flag football, baske ball, and softball. PERFORMING ARTS

'An Eye for an Eye'

MURDER, SPIES, and a cursed diamond: these were the mysterious ingredients of Lagniappe '78's "An Eye for an Eye." Lagniappe's first comedy-mystery musical, it was the best-attended production ever. The show earned $6000, of which $1500 was donated for student scholarships.

Set in the 1940's, the story recounts the efforts of Detective Dan Thorne to solve a double-murder and recover the priceless diamond, "The Eye of Vishnu." The diamond, stolen from India 20 years before, has now disappeared from the home of the late Col. Whittaker, whose sister and nurse have been murdered. Whodunnit? Thorne is determined to find out. Along the way, he encounters several interesting suspects, including the lovely Jennifer Downing, with whom he falls in love. Eventually, Thorne finds the killer, returns the diamond to its homeland, and marries Miss Downing.

But the diamond was not all that was taken. The audience's attention was also captured, as each person attempted to solve the case by himself. Director John Newcombe stated that the believability of the plot made Lagniappe '78 "not just another student production but a talented and mature show." Under the co-leadership of Evan Kavanagh and Bill Southern, the 39th all-student production sparkled with the creativity and ingenuity of cast, crew, orchestra, and board members.

'Inherit the Wind'

BY THE TIME the wooden gavel had knocked against the judge's desk and quieted all disturbances in the courtroom, the audience's attention for this year's Winter play had already been captured. Written by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee and based upon the famous Scopes "monkey" trial, the drama involves a Chicago attorney named Drummond who comes to a small town in Tennessee to defend a young school teacher, Bertram Cates. Cates is charged with violating the state's law against teaching Darwin's theory of evolution. Opposing Drummond is Matthew Brady, a Bible-toting Fundamentalist and three time candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

During four weeks of laborious rehearsal, the cast and crew concentrated on producing a dynamic show. By building an extension to the stage and using spotlights to focus on different settings, the crew aided the talented cast in providing impressive entertainment. Under the direction of Robert Boyle and his assistant Colleen Connors, all involved in the production "Inherit the Wind" were awarded the fine tribute of audience appreciation.

'Bye, Bye Birdie' and

THE FRESHMAN-SOPHOMORE classes traced the New Trier stage with two spring plays, Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors" and Michael Stewart's "Bye, Bye Birdie," initiating new and promising talent into the performing arts department.

The frosh/soph cast of "A Comedy of Errors" cleverly combined the wit of Shakespeare with their own ingenuity and spontaneity. The amusingly entangled plot involved the mistaken identity of two sets of twins and the resulting confusion.

In "Bye, Bye Birdie," leather jackets and hair grease spilled onto the stage as heartbroken bobby soxers watched their rock and roll singing idol, Conrad Birdie, march off to war. The Elvis-type singer led the cast of screaming teenagers in a memorable performance of song and dance.

THE RISING CURTAIN reveals the backstage of a 1940's theater, with stage managers and chorus girls rehearsing for an opening night performance. By scene four, however, the stage is transformed into a quaint Elizabethan village in the 1600's; merchants and artisans stand before the audience, conversing in an open market.

Such was the contrast skillfully portrayed in the 1978 spring opera "Kiss Me, Kate." The play within a play revolves around a group of actors in a musical adaptation of the Shakespearean comedy "The Taming of the Shrew." The actors live the same lives offstage as they create onstage. The two plots run so similar a course that they eventually merge at the finale, ending happily fo both the Elizabethans an the actors.

The best of the chora dance, and orchestra groups at New Trier com bined their talents to form well-polished production, a always a highlight of th erforming arts year. The lay, directed by Mr. dward Steele-Nicholson, eatured several outstand- ng dance numbers, a score y Cole Porter, and an xcellent cast which delight- d the audience with its louble dose of comedy.

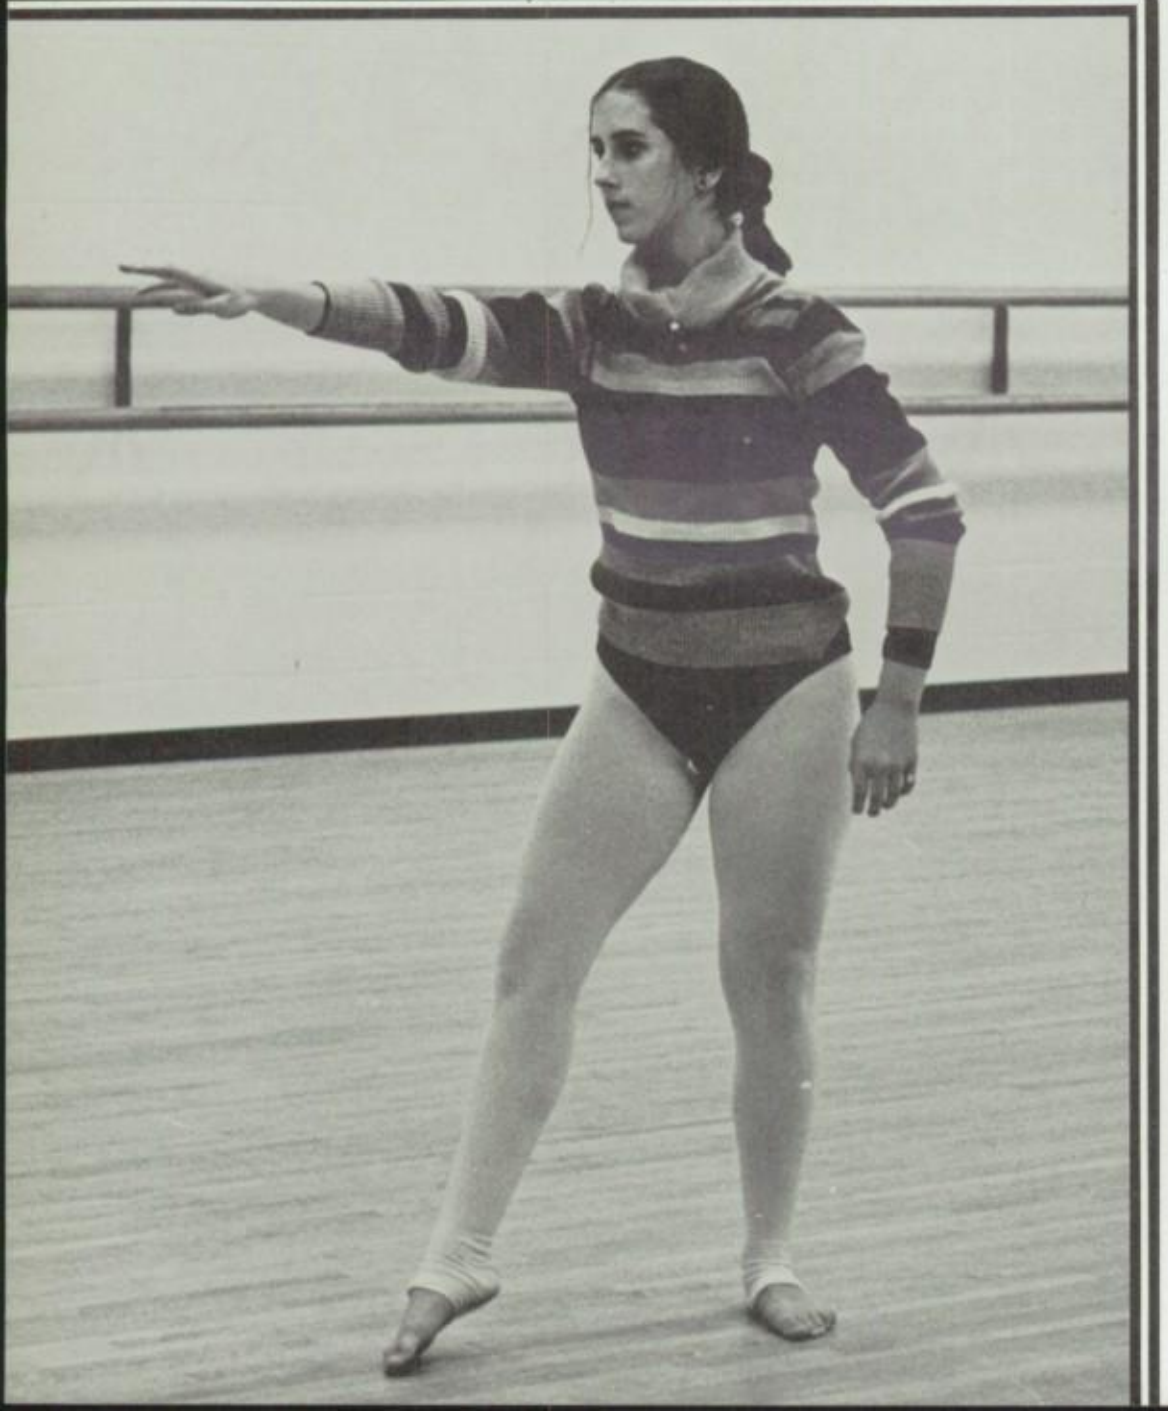
Dance concert '78

JUST AS AN ARTIST may paint violent storms in bold oils or a misty dawn in pale pastels, a dancer may choreograph wild, flashing tourjetes or gentle, fluid chasses to convey a definite image. Using music as a tool, the advanced dancers painted pictures in motion to produce a vibrant Dance concert '78.

Splashed and dabbled with a mixture of tones and moods, the first entirely student-choreographed Dance concert flowed with creativity. The performance leaped from the Renaissance period in Ellen Kerr's "Amenities" to the wild, wild west in Judy Hellman's "Billy the Kid" to the New Trier party scene in Felicia McCarren's "Party." Humorous endeavors for individualism appeared in Mimi Goese's "Un-" while sombre nuances of a power struggle were painted in Cassandra Laughlin's "Power Play." The five choreographers colored the stage with a brilliant spectrum of the imagination.



Right: Sporting the social graces of the 1890's, advanced dancers corner the attention of the audience. Far right: Transferred from the Renaissance period to the 20th century, Ellen Kerr's dance arrives upon the New Trier stage with all its amenities intact. Below right: Two advanced dancers come to grips with their roles in "Power Play" as choreographer Cassandra Laughlin looks on. Below: After weeks of extensive practice, Sue Addison reaches for final perfection in Judy Hellman's "Billy The Kid." (Williams, Hirsh, Moy, Moy)

The arts of music and movement were blended in this year's performance as the dances were complemented with music from New Trier East's Symphony orchestra. Student Phil Moraitis's piano accompaniment electrified Laughlin's "Power Play," while composer-accompanist June Shellene outlined Goese's "Un-" with one of her original scores. The varied shades and techniques of the compositions displayed the flexible range and competence of the advanced dance students. Indispensable to the student-choreographed concert were Mrs. Suzanne Wente, Mrs. Christine Fassnacht, and Mr. Toby Nicholson, who provided the integral elements of artistic instruction, criticism, and support.

Stage-struck

THE STAGE is dark, silent, empty. Shadowy figures can barely be distinguished moving in the blackness, executing precise, mysterious functions. As the lights go up, their work becomes dramatically visible. The blank stage has been transformed into a vibrant setting, be it a faraway landscape, a crowded street, a luxurious drawing room, or a sleezy barroom. As the actors perform, the anonymous figures continue to work unseen behind the curtains and below the stage, applying make-up, moving props, making split-second changes and last-minute alterations in the simulated world of the stage. They are the crews, and they are responsible for a large part of the style and tone of each Performing arts production.

In addition to devoting months of planning to behind-the-scenes preparations, crew members also provided spontaneous ingenuity during moments of unsuspected crisis throughout the show. Indefinite hours and slidin timetables became a part every crew member's way life as each person willingl accepted the demands of h work. Through their dedica tion, the reality of the crew handiwork created a mak believe world on stage.

THE CAST OF "Sea the West" corralled their aquatic talents to bring cowboy country to Indian territory in 1977. The 40 members, steered by Faculty sponsor Joyce McNaughton and Student director Carrie Goldsmith, conveyed the frontier theme to the audience through western style stunts, music, props, and special effects.

Square dances, shoot-outs, and dancing saloon girls were all at the hoe down of Water ballet '77. "I Shot the Sheriff" and "The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly" were two of the tunes that complemented the atmosphere of the old frontier. Props and special effects included strobe lights, a live horse, and dry ice. The Water ballet cast rounded up skill, hard work and creativity to lasso the audience's attention with an entertaining show.

AT 8:13 the clock doth tell
The time is ripe and all is well.
Says Mr. Denk, in full array,
To introduce the bold display
That now begins the demonstration:
"Welcome to Gymagination."

Strobe lights flicker in the eyes
While music adds to each surprise.
On mini-tramps the troops appear
To fly without the slightest fear.
With Miss Kluka's clear directions
They've rehearsed to reach perfection.

They tumble, twirl, and twist around
But land with just a hint of sound.
And each routine is so precise
The audience wants to see it twice.
Applause, applause, the gymnasts smile
The work was hard, but well worthwhile.

(Low)

Ultra band

A BAND IS like a chorus, with its high, middle, and low voices. The high voice, which includes the trumpet, flute, clarinet, and bells, provides the melody. The harmony is furnished by the middle voice, consisting of the horn, saxophone, bassoon, and tympani. The trombone, tuba, and bass drum constitute the low voice, which keeps the beat of the piece.

Through hours of rehearsal, the Honor and Concert band members combined these elements to produce a rich and colorful tone. Their performances reflected this effort as they added a new Honor band/Concert band program to the Performing arts calendar. Distinguished performances at the Spring and Winter festivals, as well as a strong showing at the annual State band contest complemented a prosperous year for Honor band.

Under the direction of Miss Phyllis Clendening, the Jazz ensemble and lab bands blended rhythm and blues into a well-balanced, swinging sound. The Jazz bands supplemented the Honor and Concert bands in providing a sound music program at New Trier.

Stay tuned

THE FAMILIAR HUM of an oboe's A note signals the beginning of orchestra rehearsal. As each instrument is carefully tuned, every head tilts to hear the pitch perfectly. Bits of melodies crescendo into a dissonant roar and then slowly die away. The musicians glance over the edge of their stands, silently awaiting their cue.

Working under Mr. Stanley Ackerman's direction, the entire orchestra pitched in to bring distinction to this season's performances. Expertise was reflected in the gleam of the brass and the polish of the woodwinds, engrained in the strings, and drummed up by the percussion section. Their effort brought them the honor of playing for over 5,000 musicians at the prestigious Midwest music clinic, and of being invited to film an exclusive television program at Ball State university this spring. Back in Winnetka, the orchestra enlivened the Dance concert and both seasonal festivals. While symphony's first note was an A, their finale was A plus.

Screen gems

ITV'S STUDENT staff took a professional step forward this year in the production of the ITV Report, a bi-weekly TV news magazine covering current in-and-around school events. Written, directed and broadcast by ITV personnel, the Report kept students informed about school activities, issues, and personalities.

Directed by station manager William Ryan and Faculty adviser Richard Dienhart, ITV continued its services to the community as an educational broadcasting system. Aided by professional TV consultant Ms. Sharon O'Brien, ITV produced instructional video films utilized by NTE classes as well as neighboring elementary and junior high schools. Thus, ITV succeeded in keeping its viewers tuned in and satisfied.

News briefs

A SCHOOL NEWSPAPER must interest and entertain those who read it. The staff of this year's News hopes to bring interest and creativity into the news."

These were the words of Editor-in-chief Julie Rubin as they appeared in the year's first editorial. The New Trier News achieved this goal in its '77-'78 volume with the addition of a widely varied features section. This addition successfully increased the New's readership by a notable margin over previous years.

Features editor Ray Parmer pointed out: "Our main objective is not only to entertain but to present the students with each facet of the school and community."

Rubin expanded the range of interests further with new views on a wide spectrum of topics in her weekly editorials. Her thought provoking "Has Rowdiness Gone Too Far?" discussed a sadly revealing incident which stunned New Trier earlier this year.

The news and sports departments maintained a high quality of journalism while keeping up with the innovative trends set by the features department. The new column "News Briefs" was added to supplement the more thorough coverage of each week's events, giving every club and activity an equal share of publicity. A weekly calendar of upcoming sports events gave the student body a reference index for sports information.

"The Armchair Vegetable," a column by Sports editor John Phillips, was perhaps the best example of the New's new brand of entertainment. Its clever blend of humor and factual reporting broke the mold of conventional sports coverage. This type of change in the New Trier News set high journalistic standards.

EVERY NOW AND THEN, everyone is moved by the inspiration to do something creative. Inklings, the artistic and literary publication of New Trier, provided a showcase to exhibit student creativity in poetry, prose, and artwork. Following a vigorous promotional campaign to encourage contributions, Inklings board members discussed the pieces submitted, leaving off names to insure impartiality. Editor -in- chief Karen Appel commented that the staff endeavored to include a greater number of humorous works to complement the serious material. Believing that they should represent all forms of art at New Trier, Inklings went beyond the limits of publishing the magazine by sponsoring a dance and drama day in the spring. Their efforts resulted in a well-directed, well-rounded, and well-received Inklings.

Wednesday: Spanish test; Thursday; Math test; Friday: ECHOES story rough draft due . . . Oh no . . .

Better talk to the Editor-in-chief, and then the General managing editors . . . Maybe I should interview Mr. Frey?

Alright, let's see what I have: Chuck Lawson says that the staff is very strong in every area of production. Dave Waldstein says that all the stories are both informative and creative, and Jane Beaman has made directory more interesting than ever. And everyone knows that the photo staff under Head photographer Sarkis Tatosian is among the best ECHOES has ever had. Wrapping it all up, 31 full color pictures make the most dynamic cover to date.

Announcements! Some quiet in here? . . . impossible! The student life section needs essays for its theme, "Movin' On," and Laura Thomas needs juniors to do indexing after school. How am I supposed to index and caption at the same time?

Yes, I know that ECHOES story is due tomorrow. Don't worry, I'll have it.

I hope my senior editor likes this; I don't want to rewrite it again . . .

Is it OK? You like the story, and the captions? . . . Excellent!

FACULTY

Faculties intact

AS EXPRESSED BY the report of the North central visitation committee: "The commitment of the faculty (at New Trier) to quality education is commendable. . . . An excellent quality of educational leadership exists at the district and campus levels."

Though the report had much praise for New Trier's faculty, the NCA did have some suggestions for improvement. Teachers from each department formed follow-up committees to determine the feasibility of these recommendations and incorporate them with their own suggestions to offer an even better program to the student body.

With last year's passing of the tax-hike referendum faculty members were finally freed from the fear of being laid off and could now oncentrate fully on teaching. n light of the improved conomic situation, the dministration was able to ire many new teachers, thus ncreasing the variety of ourses offered and decreasng the average class size. Teachers assumed the roles f lecturers, supervisors, and ounselors to provide tudents with a well-rounded nd meaningful educational xperience.

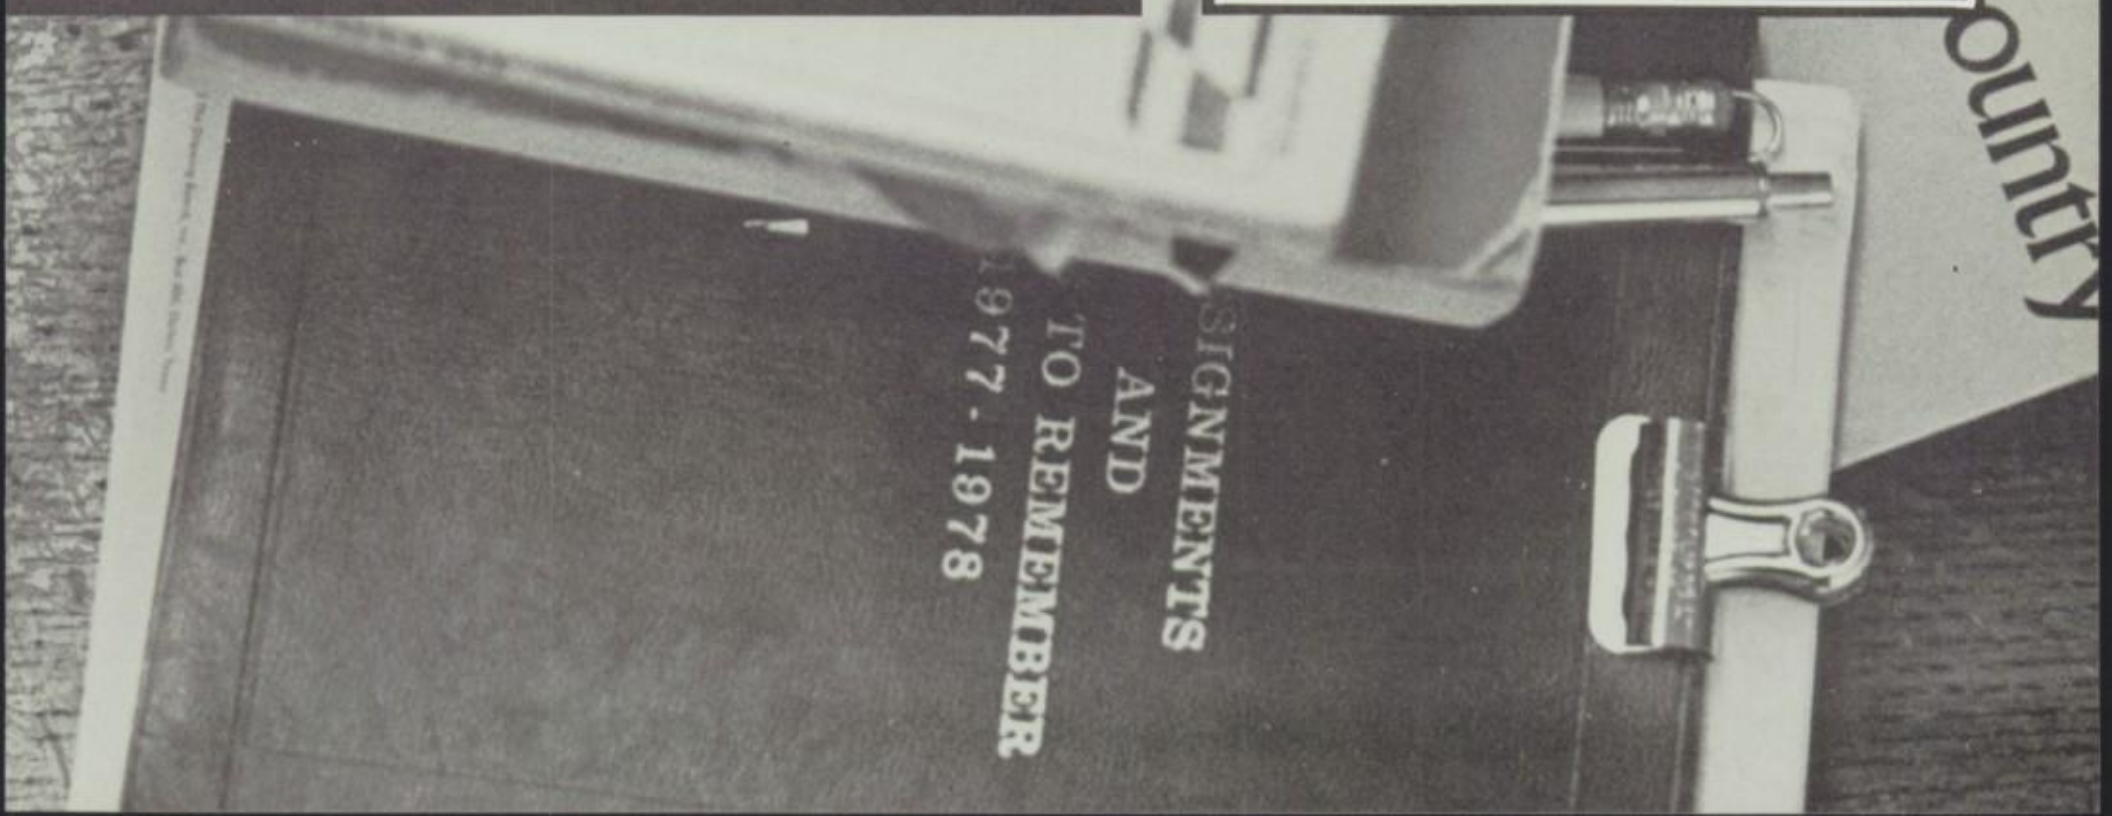
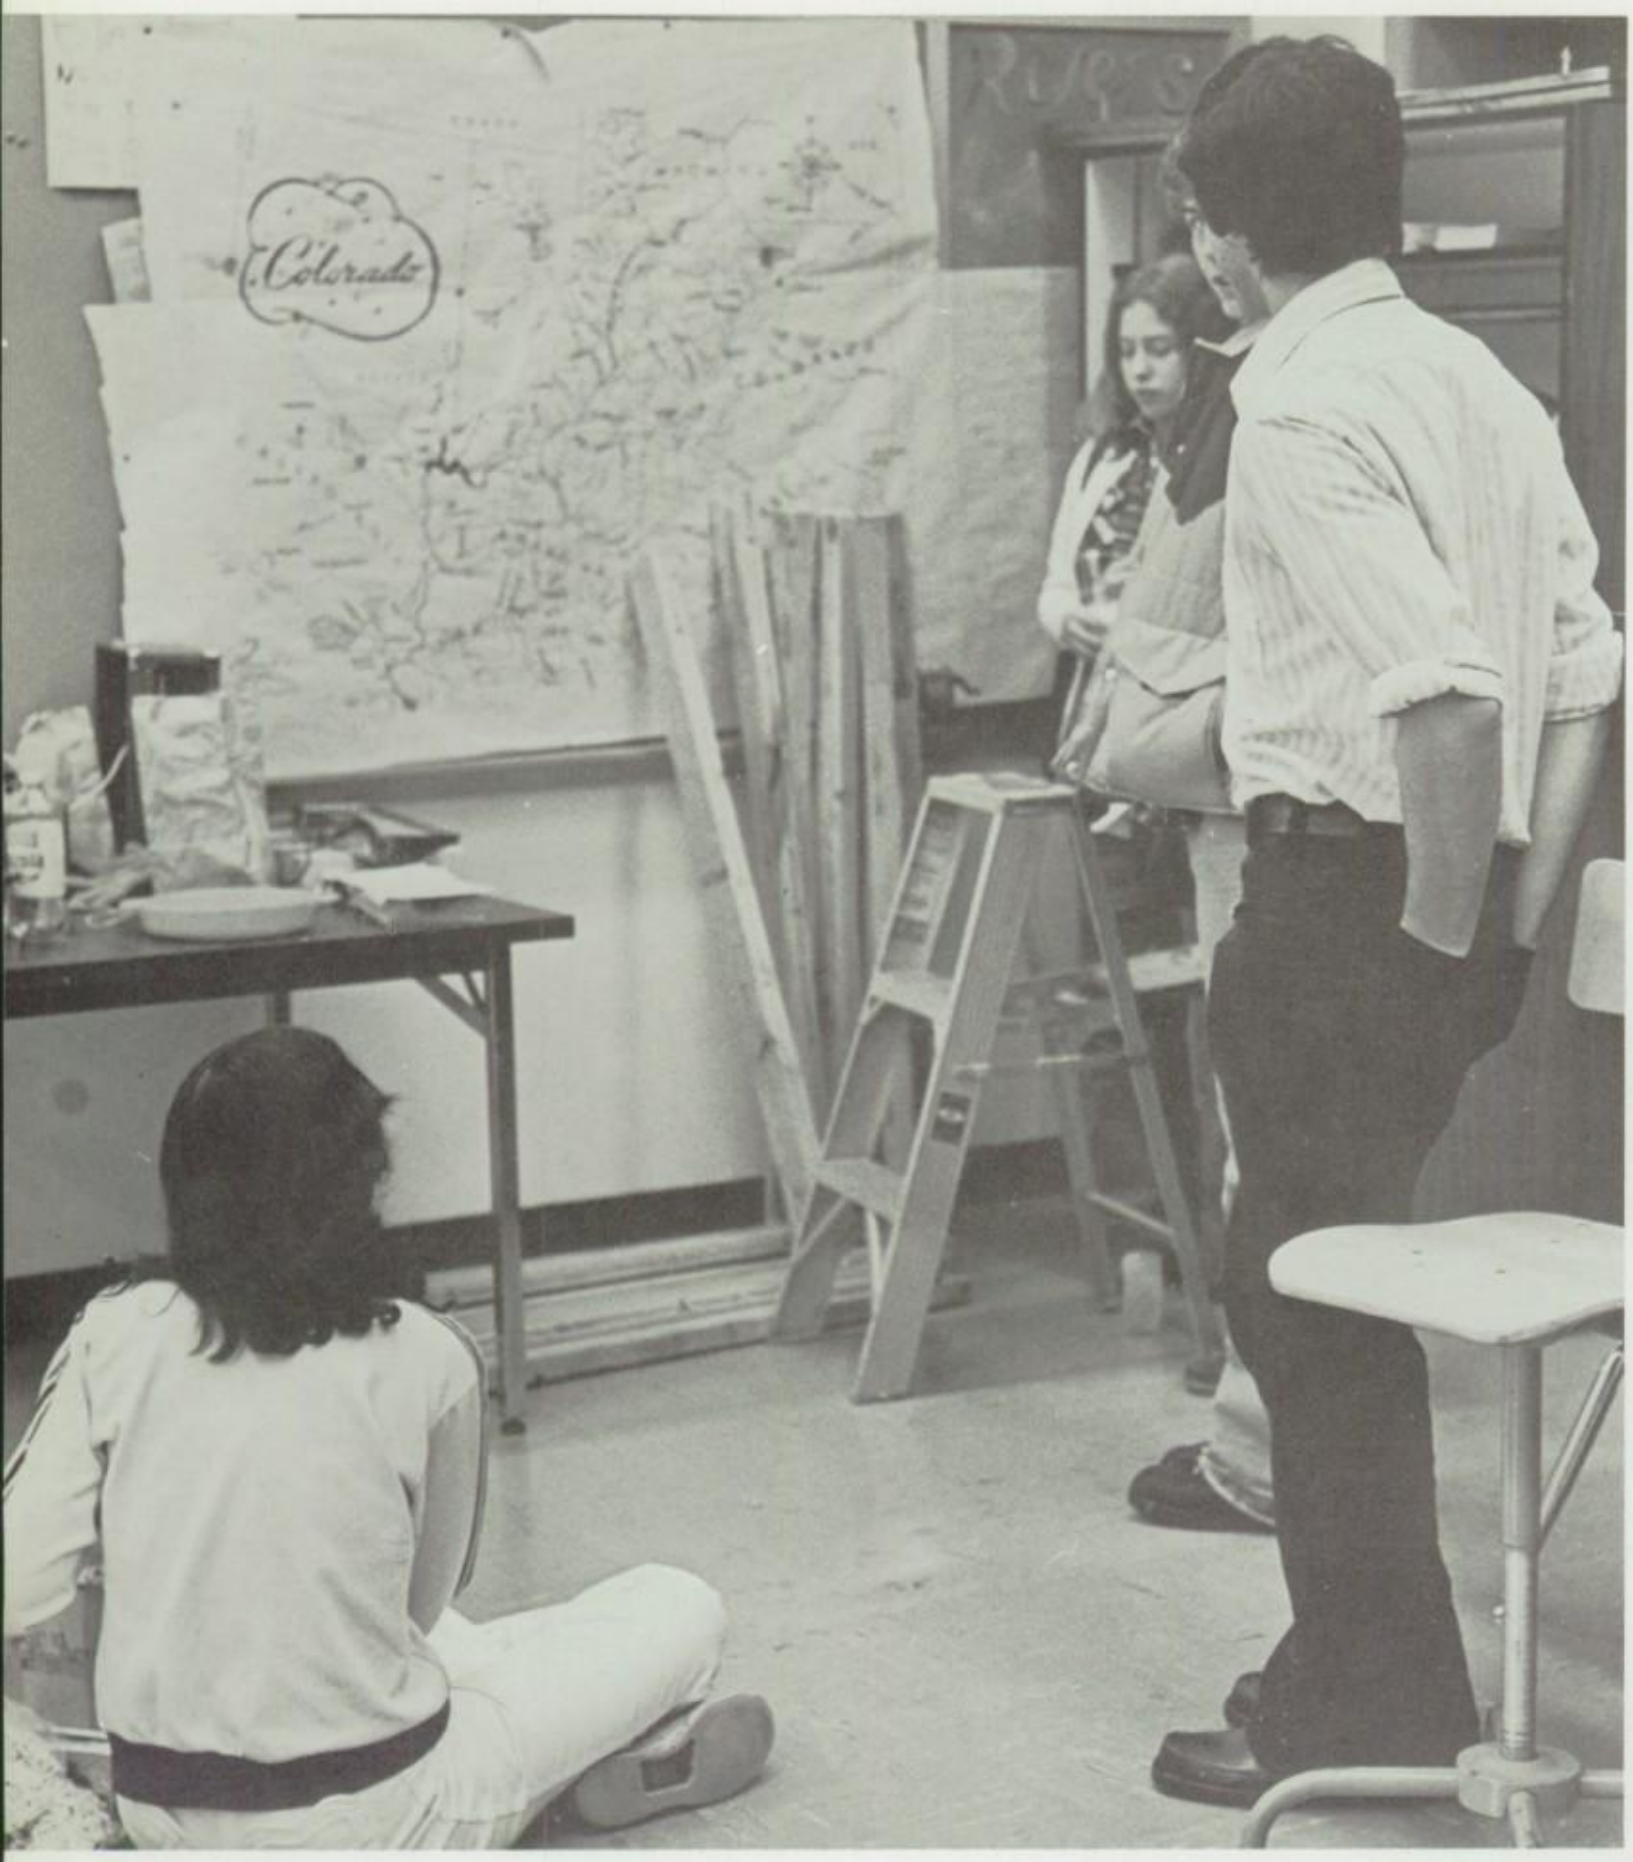
UNDERCLASSMEN





Center stage

THE CENTER FOR self-directed learning is located on the first floor in an obscure corner of the school. It consists of only four rooms and about 150 people, though the number fluctuates periodically. It is true that if you walk into the main room at any time from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. you will find someone playing poker, sleeping, or sitting around discussing life.

But before you cross the Center off your list of worthy learning situations, look closer. There are seldom 150 students in these rooms at any one time because the learning is not confined to within New Trier's brick walls. Centerites students can be found anywhere: from White's drugstore to Washington working with children in a day care center or elders in a nursing home. Independent projects may require an ecological expedition or a report on existentialism. The possibilities are endless and the Centerite has the opportunity to try any number of them.

CENTER

STUDENTS COME TO the Center to gain a sense of individuality which they could not find in the "parent school." Dealing with personal evaluations instead of grades, the Centerite is spurred onward by self-motivation alone. The student also comes under review of his peers and facilitators who check his progress throughout the year.

Faculty facilitators Mrs. Paul, Ms. Miller, Mr. Gregory, and Mr. Johnson aided the students in channeling their time and energies toward constructive goals. The staff provided a backbone for the program and kept it running smoothly.

SOPHOMORES

ACCELERATING past reshman year, the so-homore entered on the ad to further adventure. ielding to the driver's ed enzy, he also allotted time r geometry theorems and harles Dickens novels. The phomore abandoned eshman fears and anxie-es and dove head-on into various school activities. Although the road was sometimes rocky, the sophomore felt more at ease in his surroundings as he coasted through the year which marked the halfway point on his high school odyssey.

The Sophomore class steering committee put many active miles behind it by sponsoring social functions and services. Paving the way for newcomers, the committee welcomed them at the New student party. Their generosity spilled forth at Christmastime when the class adopted a needy family, providing food and clothing for nine children.Acting as an anti-freeze in cold February, the Sophomore turnabout livened up the drudgery of mid-winter study. With their end-of-the-year car wash, sophomores rolled along on their way to a relaxing sumer and a final lane change into Junior year.

Exercising its right to assemble, the Sophomore class sits up to hear candidate promises. (Hirsh)

WITH A MILLION avenues unfolding before them, the Class of '79 built up momentum as they progressed toward their goals. Propelling themselves with gathering velocity through the onslaught of uncertainties, the Junior class maneuvered itself through a decision-making period heavy with question marks: college, possible career goals, junior theme topics, prom dates, and the disbelief that senior year was fast approaching.

The class was headed by an active steering committee that pointed them towards many festivities throughout the year including a popular turnabout, prom, and pizzafest. These activities supplied money to the Junior class for future events as well as scholarships. Once in motion, the Junior class generated an abundant supply of energy to power themselves into senior year.

Rushing among the vast opportunities offered, the junior's world becomes a whirling landscape of classes and activities. (Spray)

WHEN WOULD the mail come? He could not bear waiting a moment longer! His friends had already received their college letters of acceptance; surely his would come today. He had been worrying for days, anxiously waiting and hoping for acceptance into what his friends called "his college."

The senior's mind raced, reflecting upon all the good and bad times at New Trier: the attendance office and tardy slips; all the "thank-God-it's Friday's, followed inevitably by the Monday morning blues; his favorite class, lunch 109; early morning gym makeups; cramming for finals; good grades and "well-I-tried" grades; midnight typing of English papers. High school. How different college would be! A roommate, three cafeteria meals a day, no parents. What would the parties be like? Wait what was he saying? He didn't know if he was even going to college. Oh, will that mailman ever get here?

After long months of anticipation, Becki Ambrose stands on the threshold of being accepted to the college of her choice. (Emerson)

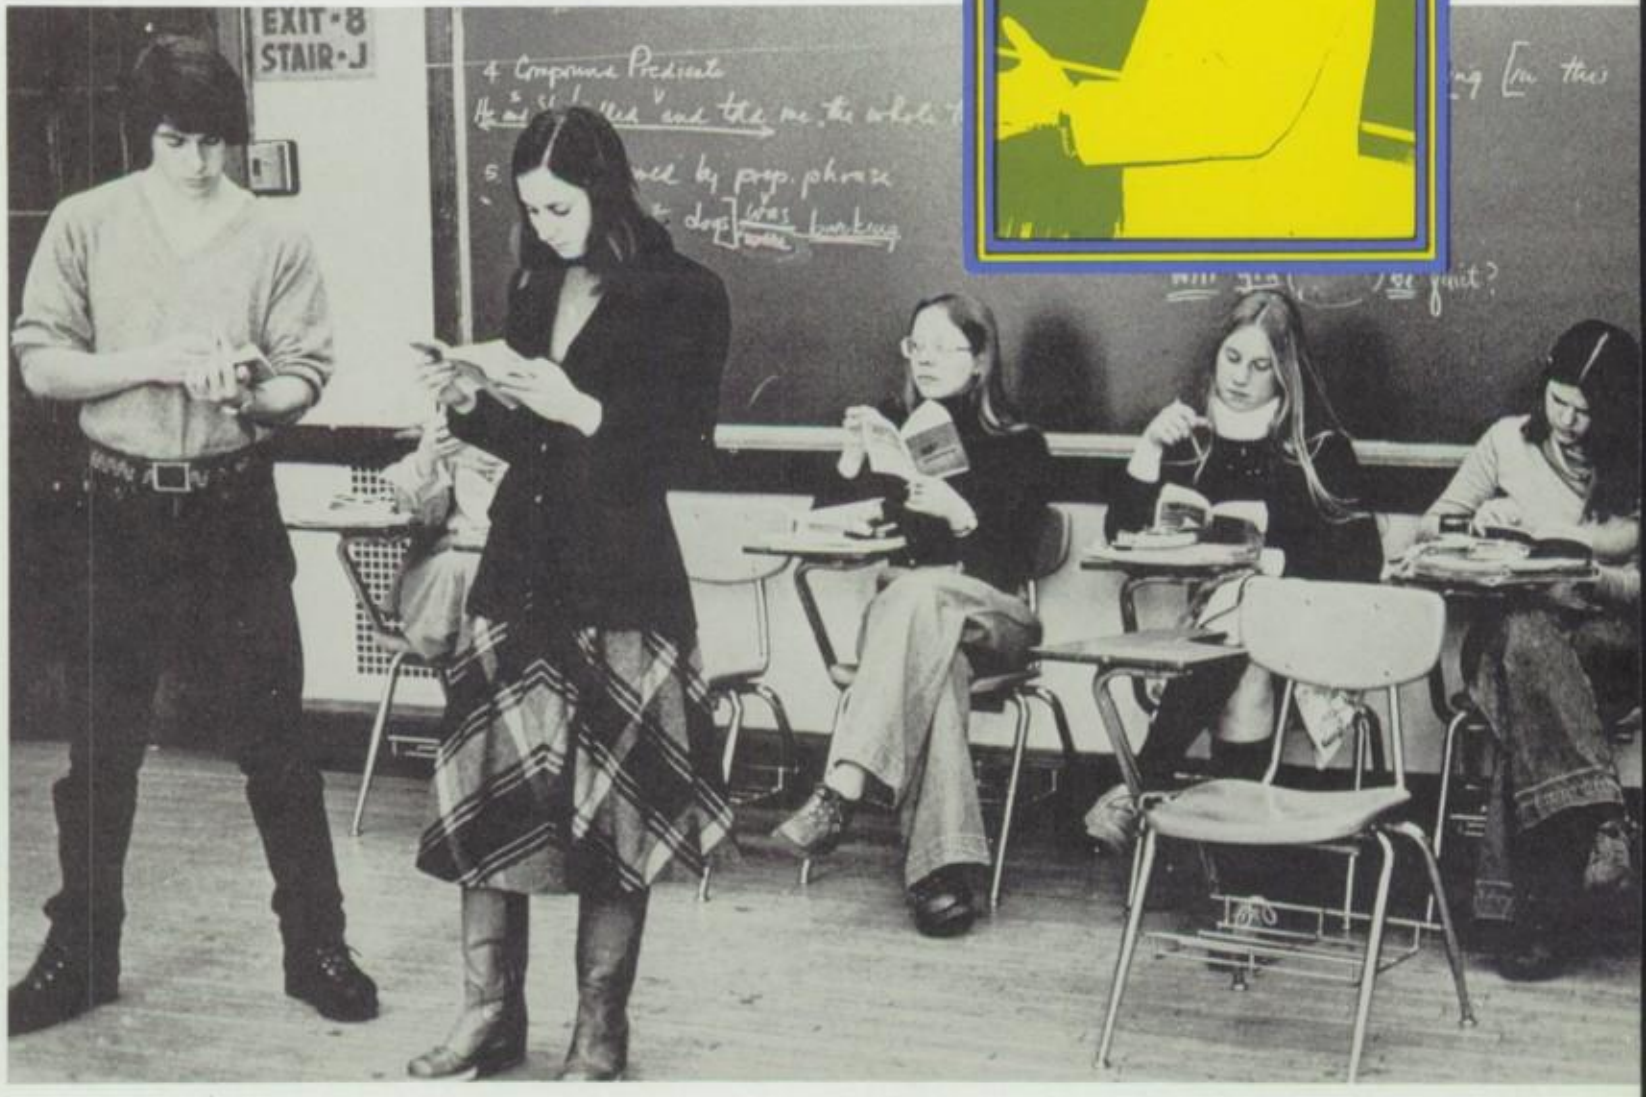
UP TO THIS point, ECHOES has focused on the many extracurricular activities that New Trier students participate in. We do not wish, however, to neglect the most important facet of our school, the main reason for our being here: academics. Even with the wide variety of school activities it offers, New Trier is still at its core an institution for learning.

Approximately three to four hours of every school day and a given amount of time each night are devoted by the student towards learning the three R's and then some. New Trier's academic program is as wide and varied as its non-academic program. In celebration of its long standing tradition of excellence, we have devoted this section of the book to a closer look at the New Trier academic experience.



Academics

ANY NEW TRIER student - past or present - has most likely been exposed to a wealth of knowledge and experience not often found in other high schools. The education of the mind and the nurturing of the heart is an ongoing process of development. New Trier's role in this learning process begins on the first day of school when the confused and bewildered freshman wanders into the gym and learns his first lesson in high school: all his classes are not in room 113. As he grows, his appreciation of New Trier's academic approach grows with him. The school's job doesn't end until that same student walks out the gymnasium door with four years of learning firmly in hand ready to serve him at any time.

IT HAS BEEN a long standing philosophy at New Trier that the most effective educational program should appeal not only to the mind but the the heart as well. Very few classes at New Trier fail to meet this standard. Among the extensive diversity of courses offered are those which stress working with one's hands, and those which allow one to work with one's feelings. All classes, however, offer the student an opportunity to work with his imagination.

AFTER A YEAR of contending with irate Story editor and anxious Directory editors, uncooperative Performing arts directors and groups that didn't line up straight, the Photography staff of '78 still managed to produce some of the best work ever to be published in ECHOES. The pictures on the following pages demonstrate each photographer's creativity and talent.
